Veteran Bill Unanimously Approved by Both Houses

Benefits Measure That May Cost U. S. Six Billion Sent To White House

By the Associated Press

With the unanimous backing of Congress, the "G. I. Bill of Rights"—an overall war veterans' benefits measure—went to the White House yesterday for the President's action.

A 379-to-0 record vote in the House completed consideration of the compromise approved unanimously Monday by the Senate. A Senate-House committee had compromised differences between the two branches on the big bill, estimated to cost between $3,000,000,000 and $6,500,000,000.

As it left Capitol Hill, after almost three months' consideration, the bill provided for Government-financed education, Government-guaranteed loans, job-finding assistance, hospitalization, and unemployment compensation for veterans of the present war.

What Veterans May Get

Under its provisions, any veteran whose education was interfered with by his war service may resume schooling after his discharge, provided he has served 90 days. In the case of a veteran who was not over 25 at the time he entered service, the legislation presumes his education was interfered with; those over 25 must prove interference.

Maximum schooling is limited to four years, depending upon the veteran's length of service. The Government will pay not more than $500 annually for tuition and fees, and $50 monthly subsistence allowance if there are no dependents, and $75 when the veteran has dependents.

Guaranteed Loans

To help veterans to purchase homes, farms or small businesses, the legislation provides for Government-guaranteed loans by private or public lending agencies at not more than 4 per cent interest, repayable in 20 years, with the Veterans' Administration absorbing the interest charges for the first year. The Governemnt guarantee may not exceed 50 per cent of the principal of a loan and no guarantee may exceed $2000.

The unemployment section guarantees to a veteran weekly payments of $20 for not more than 52 weeks during the first two years after discharge. It provides for creating of a job-finding agency under the director of Selective Service, the chairman of the War Manpower Commission and the Veterans' Administrator.

To provide facilities for the hospitalization of veterans, the legislation authorizes a 500 million dollar hospital construction program.

Mokmer Airdrome Now Operating, MacArthur Says

Advanced Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, Wednesday, June 14 (AP).—Mokmer airdrome on Biak Island in the Schouten group has been put into operation, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced today.

Infantry troops on Biak pushed westward toward Borokoe airstrip as airplanes started using Mokmer Tuesday.

Mokmer strip is approximately 880 miles from the Philippines, closest point to that enemy stronghold now held by the Allies.

Americas landed on Biak Island off Dutch New Guinea May 27 and took the important air strip June 7 after hard fighting.

Japanese raided Biak Sunday night with six plaes, damaging an American destroyer and causing several casualties on land. Mitchell medium bombers sank four small Jap merchantmen off Manokwari, Dutch New Guinea, Monday.

Liberators attacked Palau again Sunday and Monday, starting fires. They also hit Truk in daylight Monday.

Battered Nazis Make Stand, Stiffly Resist Allies in Italy

Rome, June 13 (AP).—Remnants of the German Fourteenth Army fleeing northwestward from Rome have dug in before the road junction town of Bolsena, on the northeastern tip of the lake of that name, and for the past 48 hours have been offering stiff resistance to the Allied Fifth Army, a front dispatch said tonight.

Bolsena, 60 miles from Rome and 8 miles from the important center of Orvieta, is cradled in the half moon of commanding hills, and the Nazis have been pouring antitank and machine-gun fire at the American tanks and infantry since Sunday.

The enemy's position commands the only approach to Bolsena by highway.

"Until we ran into this fire," reported Associated Press Correspondent Sid Feder, "we had traveled 17 miles from Viterbo in slightly more than 24 hours along a road littered with German transport and the bodies of horses.

"Although the Allies have suffered some casualties in this stand of the Germans to protect the vital highway 74 miles beyond Bolsena—the route connecting eastern and western enemy forces—the stand also is proving costly to the Nazis. Some 50 prisoners have been brought in the past 24 hours."

The pursuing Allies captured Valentano, highway junction on the western shore of the lake, and pressed on toward Latera, 4 miles farther north.

"Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark told his troops they had broken the German armies opposing them in Italy, and said, "I want to thank you from the bottom of my heart."

On the eastern side of Lake Bolsena, South African armored forces of the Eighth Army ran into a stiff battle for Bagno Regio, 5 miles from the important center of Orvieto.

East of Rome, the Eighth Army had all but cleared Highway No. 5, the broad transpeninsular route leading from the capital to the port of Pescara on the Adriatic Sea. Two more cities on the highway, Popoli and Carsoli, were captured yesterday, and Allied troops crossed the Saline River, 5 miles north of captured Pescara, at several places.

The Mediterranean Tactical Air Force flew about 1100 sorties during the day, shooting up what enemy transports tried to sneak by on the roads in daylight.

Roosevelt Aim Above Politics, Hatch Asserts

'Ready to Sacrifice His Political Life,' Senators Are Told

By the Associated Press

In a heated Senate debate on foreign policy, Senator Hatch (D., N. Mex.) declared yesterday that President Roosevelt is "ready to sacrifice his political life" if that would bring American unity behind peace aims.

But the Democrats would not permit him to retire, Hatch added.

Challenged by Senator Bridges (R., N. H.) to say where the President and the Democratic Party stand, Hatch drew this declaration of principles from the President's statements, his acts and private conversations:

"Franklin D. Roosevelt believes this world is too small for any nation to isolate itself from the rest of the world.

Cites Beliefs

"Mr. Roosevelt believes that we should demonstrate the same interest, the same courage, the same willingness to suffer and sacrifice, if necessary, in times of peace that we do in times of war—and that means taking our place among the nations of the world.

"Mr. Roosevelt believes in a court of justice. He believes that the issues and disputes which arise among nations should be settled according to the principles of law and justice, instead of according to the power of might and destruction.

"Yes, and he also believes in the independence of nations. He believes no more in the domination by this country of other nations than he believes in the domination of other nations by Germany."

Hatch said that "to provide the necessary machinery for the peaceful settlement of disputes among nations without recourse to war, I am sure Franklin D. Roosevelt is today ready to sacrific, if necessary, his political life."

CIO Activity In 4th Term Hit at Probe

Sen. Ferguson Holds Big Gifts Violation Of Political Laws

By the Associated Press

The CIO Political Action Committee argued at a Senate hearing yesterday that its "political education" activities in behalf of a fourth term are legal, but Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.), contended the organization "clearly has violated" the Corrupt Practices Act.

Ferguson said the violation occurred when PAC accepted $100,000 each from the CIO and four of its big unions. The law, he said, forbids contribution or receipt of more than $5000 by labor organizations for political purposes, and forbids labor unions to participate in elections of Federal officials.

It was a rough and tumble session of a special campaign investigating committee before which Sidney Hillman, PAC chairman, appeared at his own request to answer what he termed some "lurid stories."

Split Along Party Lines

The committee seemed to be divided strictly along party lines as to whether there should be an investigation of the PAC. There were indications that it might branch out to scrutinize other organizations, as Hillman suggested.

Hillman said the PAC was created last July to spread political education by "bringing the issues at stake to the attention of the voters, urging them to go to the polls, and stimulating widespread consideration and discussion of the qualifications of the candidates."

He said it has collected $689,784, and spent $189,112. He mentioned $5000 contributed to the primary campaign chest of Senator Pepper (D., Fla.).

Such contributions in primaries are legal, Hillman contended, although he conceded that some PAC work may have to be curtailed after presidential candidates are nominated. Senator Ball (R., Minn.) predicted the PAC would be backing President Roosevelt actively in November.

House Vote Opens OPA Orders To U. S. District Court Review

By Robert C. Albright

The House yesterday aimed another riddling fire of amendments at the price-control extension bill, but recessed before voting on the legislation's chief veto hurdle—the Bankhead-Brown cotton-textile price-raising device.

House Banking Chairman Brent Spence (D., Ky.) called for time out after the House, on another rampage of amendments restricting OPA powers:

1. Approved 127 to 115 an amendment by Representative Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.), opening OPA orders to challenge and review in the Federal District court.

2. Adopted 111 to 72, a House twin to the Senate's Chandler amendment, removing penalties except for willful violation of pricing regulations, and in effect making "ignorance" of a regulation an adequate defense.

3. Voted to forbid OPA authority to suspend a dealer's license because of price ceiling violations. Representative Jesse P. Wolcott (R., Mich.), who opposed most of the other changes, offered this one.

Dirksen's amendment, opening OPA orders to review by the Federal district courts, was the most serious Administration reverse of the day. Democratic leaders charged separate ruling by Federal judges all over the country would hamstring administration of the act. Under present law OPA orders can be reviewed only by the Emergency Court of Appeals, whose Federal judges are appointed by the Supreme Court for that purpose.

Sea and Air Battles Won In Pacific

124 Nip Fliers Shot From Sky Fierce Air Fight; Yank Losses 15

Pearl Harbor, June 13 (INS).—The powerful Pacific fleet carrier task force which battered Japanese bases in the Marianas last weekend sank 13 enemy ships, damaged 16 and destroyed 141 enemy planes, Adm. Chester W. Nimitz announced today.

Jap warships sent to the bottom of the sea during furious engagements covering a three-day period included one destroyer and three corvettes. In addition, two oilers and seven cargo ships were sunk.

Five escort ships, three destroyers, one destroyer escort and seven cargo ships were damaged.

The bold attacks of the carrier-based planes, carried out within 1500 miles of Tokyo, cost 15 American planes and 15 pilots and crew members.

124 Japs Downed in Battle

Indicating the opening assault on June 10 produced flaming sky battles, the communique said 124 Jap planes were destroyed in the action, most of them being shot out of the skies. We lost 11 Hellcat fighters and 8 pilots that day.

The devastating pounding of the Jap bases on Guam, Tinian, Saipan and Rota in the Marianas on Saturday and Sunday had been revealed by Nimitz but today's communique told for the first time of a smashing attack on a formation of enemy ships several hundred miles away on Monday. In this engagement three destroyers, one destroyer escort and two cargo ships were heavily damaged.

One enemy plane was shot down by antiaircraft fire the night of June 10 in an abortive attack by a small formation of Jap planes. No mention of damage to our vessels was made.

The full details of the three-day assault disclosed that the Japs suffered even greater damage than in the tremendous blows delivered by a Navy "bruiser" force February 21-22, during which 135 enemy planes were destroyed and 11 ships sunk or damaged.

Ships, Planes the Targets

Neither the communique nor supuplemental information made available at Pacific fleet headquarters mentioned damage inflicted on the nemy bases, leading to the belief that the main objective of the attacks was destruction of enemy shipping and aircraft.

In a speraate announcement, Nimitz told of continuing blows against other Jap central Pacific strongholders.

Army Liberator bombers struck again at Truk, in the Carolines, before dawn Monday hitting airfields and a sea-plane base. Three enemy fighters intercepted the American raiders and damaged one Liberator but all our planes returned.

Russian Push Only 36 Miles From Viipuri

2d Belt of Defenses BeforeMannerheim Line Pierced in Swift Drive

By Russell C. Landstrom

London, June 13 (AP). — The second belt of Finnish defenses guarding the approaches to the old Mannerheim Line across the Karelian Isthmus have been cleaved and the on-rushing Red army now is less than 36 miles from Finland's vital port of Viipuri, Moscow dispatches said tonight.

The broadcast Russian communique, tersely worded, stated that Soviet forces continued on the offensive during the day and captured "several enemy strong points.

Other Moscow accounts of the great northward drive by the troops of Col. Gen. Leonid A. Govorov were more expansive and called the attack by artillery, tanks, infantry and planes one of the mightiest operations the Soviets have yet attempted.

See Finish by July 1

Finnish troops were fleeing so fast before the Red army's advance that the Moscow radio said towns were being abandoned intact and there were predictions that Finland would be knocked out of the war by July 1.

Izvestia, official Soviet government newspaper, said the Finns were surrendering in ever-growing numbers.

German military commentators showed a tendency to deprecate the Russian drive against Finland as a mask for bigger operations yet to get under aw yelsewhere along the front.

Stalin Says 'Masterly'

Eisenhower Hints New Blows, In Reporting to Roosevelt

Channel Crossing Warmly Praised by Russian Leader

Moscow, June 13 (AP).—Premier Stalin paid tribute tonight to the Western Front, declaring:

"The history of war does not know any such undertaking so broad in conception, so gradiose in scale and so masterly in execution."

His statement said:

"Answering a question from a Pravda correspondent how Comrade Stalin considers the landing of the Allies in northern France, Comrade Stalin answered:

"On summarizing the seven days' battles for liberation by the Allied troops invading northern France, one can without hesitation say that the wide crossing of the Channel, and the mass landing operations of the Allies in northern France have succeeded fully. This is doubtless a brilliant success of our Allies.

"The history of war does not know any such undertaking so broad in conception, so grandiose in scale, and so masterly in execution.

"As is known, the 'invincible' Napoleon in his time shamefully failed in his plan to cross the Channel and capture the British Isles. Hitler, an hysteric who for two years bragged that he would carry out a crossing of La Manche (the Channel), did not even risk making an attempt to carry out the threat.

"Only the British and American troops succeeded in honorably fulfilling the grand plan of crossing the Channel and making a mass landing of troops.

"History will record this as an engagement of the highest order."

Mediterranean Is Named by General As Assault Point

By Ben W. Gilbert

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, in a report to President Roosevelt, yesterday stated that "other" openings will be made in Germany's European fortress.

Present operations in Normandy were described by the Supreme Commander of Allied Forces in Europe as "only part of the far larger pattern of a combined assault against the fortress of Germany by the great Russian armies from the East and our forces from the Mediterranean."

In a separate message to the commanders and troops participating in the assault on France, Eisenhower declared, "Your accomplishments in the first seven days of the campaign have exceeded my brightest hopes."

Eisenhowever's Report Read

President Rosevelt read Eisenhower's report to him at his regular news conference.

The text follows:

"On June 6 we initiated the first vital step leading to the decisive battle of Europe. The first great obstacle has been surmounted—that is the breaching of the beach defenses that the enemy by lavish employment of enslaved labor had installed in forest-like density along the entire lateral of northwest Europe.

"Gallantry, fortitude and skill were called for, and these, in abundant measure, the Allied force has displayed since the opening day of the battle. A particularly satisfying feature of the fighting has been the fine performance of troops — American, British, and Canadian—committed to battle for the first time.

"Just as they did and are still doing in the Mediterranean, these untried Allied units have conducted themselves in a manner

De Gaulle Wins Recognition For Committee From 4 Nations

London, June 13 (AP).—Gen. Charles de Gaulle today won recognition of his committee of National Liberation as the "provisional government of the French Republic" from four governments-in-exile.

Poland, Belgium, Czechoslovakia and Luxembourg announced their actions, and the French leader was seeking the same recognition from all United Nations.

De Gaulle was expected to pay an early visit to France, where the Allied invasion has spurred resistance of the underground forces, in the hope of winning public support for his committee and to strengthen his hand before leaving for Washington to seek recognition by the United States.

Normandy Chiefs Named

Algiers, June 13 (AP).—The French Committee of National Liberation, serving notice that it expects the Allies to respect its authority within France, named civil and military administrators today for liberated regions of Normandy.

Francois Coulet was appointed "regional commissar of the republic for the region of Rouen" to handle civilian administration and Col. Pierre de Chevigne was named "commander of the third military region" (Normandy).

Colonel Chevigne, once stationed in Washington as Military Attache, was assigned to handle liaison between the Allied armies and organized French resistance groups.

U. S. Attitude Stands, Roosevelt Declares

President Roosevelt said yesterday he has not yet heard anything from his offer of last week to receive Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

Mr. Roosevelt added to his news conference that there is no change in the attitude of this country toward the De Gaulle French Committee of National Liberation.

Meanwhile, it was learned that Britain has officially indicated that it will go along with United States policy toward De Gaulle.

The notice served to offset the embarrassment created by the action of the exiled governments.

The United States has held out against such recognition for the Algiers committee before a liberated French people can make their own views known. The contention here has been that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower should be free to deal with whom he chooses in French areas his invading troops set free.

Britain had leaned a good deal further toward acceptance of De Gaulle's demands for recognition.

Diplomats here believe Russia and China will stand by the United States and Britain.

Pilot Dies in Crash

Richmond, Va., June 13 (AP).—A midnight crash of a P-47 fighter plane one and one half miles east of the Richmond air base took the life of Second Lieut. Ralph M. Ecklund, 24-year-old air base pilot of Erie, Pa., officials there announced today.

Nazi Machine Reported Cracking

Rommel, Runstedt Go to Hitler In Defense Row, Allies Hear

By Wes Gallagher

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 13 (AP).—carefully studied reports reaching here from the Continent tonight indicate that some weaknesses have begun to appear in Hitler's war machine under the impact of the first week of Allied invasion.

One indication of this is a new quarrel reliably reported to have broken out between Marshal Erwin Rommel, immediate commander of the defending forces, and his superior, Marshal Karl von Rundsteda, although reports that Rommel had been removed from his command were received here with skepticism.

Rommel, who is described as always eager to commit himself early in battle, was reported by underground sources to have insisted that Von Rundsteda, overall German commander in the west, throw in strategic reserves to break the Allied beachhead.

Von Rundstedt, however, fearing further Allied landings, is said to have declined, ordering Rommel to get along with what he had. Hitler himself was reported to have arrived on the scene and set up a headquarters at Lemans, about 100 miles behind the lines, where the two leaders took their quarrel to him.

It was considered unlikely here that Hitler removed his old favorite Rommel.

Allies Clamp Pincers on Caen; Gain Five Miles

Heavy Fighting Rages in Streets Of Montebourg And Carentan

BULLETIN

London (Wednesday), June 14 (AP).—The Nazi-controlled Vichy radio quoted a Berlin military spokesman today as saying that important Allied shipping movements had been observed in the Gulf of Gascony, in the Bay of Biscay near the Spanish frontier, in the last few hours. A region of flat, sandy beaches, the Gulf of Gascony lies in the Biarritz region of France's west shore some 400 miles south of the Normandy beachhead.

It is too early to say whether the shipping movement is a feint for a prelude to a new invasion, the German spokesman was quoted.

Allied Supreme Headquarters, London (Wednesday), June 14 (AP). Allied armies, keeping pace almost to the hour with a time-table laid out a year ago, made advances of up to 5 miles in France Tuesday, and clamped pincers around Caen, but American troops gave ground to fierce counterattacks at Montebourg and Carentan.

At a late hour Tuesday, Allied headquarters was unable to say which side held Montebourg, 14 miles southeast of Cherbourg, and Carentan, near the base of the Normandy Peninsula. Front reports said street battles were in progress in both towns.

But with the Americans temporarily stalled in their drive on Chebourg, the Allied momentum shifted toward the east flank of the 100-mile front, where a joint Anglo-American column was reported making substantial gains in a swinging drive to get behind Caen.

British Tanks Behind Caen

Plunging through a break between the Cerisy Forest and German-regained Ailly-sur-Seulles, armored forces drove to a point south of Balleroy, 20 miles west of Caen, then swung eastward in fluid fighting across a wide front. The exact gain was not revealed, but a dispatch from Richard D. McMillan of the United Press said British tanks were drivnig behind both Tilly and Caen.

The advance penetrated close to Caumont, 6 miles southeast of Balleroy, and Villers Bocage, 7 miles south of Tilly, as the Germans were caught off guard, and the light forces encountered beat a hasty retreat.

Simultaneously, British troops north of Caen launched an attack from their bridgehead on the east bank of the Oren Canal, and drove 5 miles, capturing Troarn and applying the other arm of a pincers on Caen. Troarn is 6 miles east of Caen and 112 miles from aPris.

Only Two Roads Left to Take

Already, only two roads southeast and south-southwest from Caen are still open to the German defenders, who have been using elements of three tank divisions in counterattacks to hold the city.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters communique announced the capture of Troarn, and of Le Ham, on the Cherbourg peninsula two miles southwest of Montebourg.

While delayed at Montebourg, the Americans had driven five miles westward from St., Mere Eglise and captured Pont l'Abbe, extending their bridgehead across the Merderet River and reaching positions half-way across the 23-mile wide Normandy peninsula. They also occupied Fontenay, on the coast five miles east of Montebourg, and three villages northeast of Montebourg which the Germans had evacuated.

Allied circles said between 600 and 700 square miles of French territory had been liberated—almost exactly the amount which it was envisaged should be captured in the first seven days under the master plan.

Planned Year Ago

The tables for landing and unloading were submitted a year ago, and the chiefs of staff had their assault plan in rough form. The plan included certain areas not covered by the present beachhead, and the beachhead covers some areas not in the original plan, but in area to be conquered by a given day, plan and execution dovetailed almost perfectly.

Leopold Is Reported Captive in Germany

War Sidelights

Hitler Made Us Fight, Nazis Say

Aboard a Hospital Ship off Britain, June 13 (AP). — Corpl. George Fiene, Palatine, Ill., who learned a smattering of German from his parents, made these observations today about Germans after several trips to Normandy bringing back wounded prisoners:

They denounce Hitler and say they were forced to fight.

Most believe the war will end by fall.

The prisoners either are very young or quite old. They would like to be sent to the United States.

Some were surprised by the invasion; others had been warned in time to make last-minute preparations.

They do not stand pain as well as Allied soldiers and they appear to have less spirit. They are healthy, not underfed.

British Sacrifice Beer

British civilians have had their beer quota cut as much as 25 to 40 per cent since D-Day, in order that Allied forces in France can get as much beer as possible, a London radio broadcast, reported by CBS, said Tuesday.

It's a Cow on Him

London, June 13 (AP).—Pvt. Herbert Sather of Tacoma, Wash., paratrooper who fought in Sicily at Volturno and landed in Normandy without a scratch, returned to England today for treatment as the liberation drive's oddest casualty.

A cow sat on him in a foxhole.

Sather said the grazing cow tumbled into the hole, pinning hom down until help came.

Nazi Sensitivity

Moscow, June 13 (AP).—A Russian Tass News Agency dispatch from Zurich, Switzerland, today quoted "neutral arrivals from Germany" as saying that books, pamphlets, and pictures of the "Atlantic Wall have disappeared from German bookshops and newstands since the Allied invasion of Normandy. "They were reported to have been withdrawn from circulation on instruction of the Propaganda Ministry."

Belgian Premier Says Nazis Trying to Block NewPatriotResistance

By Alex H. Singleton

London, June 13 (AP).—Belgian Premier Hubert Pierlot told his homeland tonight that the Germans had removed King Leopold in "captivity to Germany as part of the measures decided upon in expectation of the approaching arival of the armies of liberation."

Broadcasting from London, he declared Leopold "consistently refused to exercise his high function under enemy domination."

Belgian sources said the King, kept under heavy guard in his palace sice Belgium's capitulation in 1940, was removed to Germany the day after the landing because the enemy feared he was a potential rallying point for Belgian resistance.

Sabotage Nazi Transport

The Belgian news agency reported railway workers had joined in the spreading underground resistance in Europe by sabotaging German transport.

Frenchmen and other travelers entering Spain said that Tarbes, capital of the upper Pyrenees Departfent with a population of 35-000, was in the hands of French Maquis, who had taken 300 Germans of the Tarbes garrison prisoners after the British fighting.

They reported strong forces of mobile guards and gendarmes in the pay of Vichy had been dispatched by special train to Tarbes from Bayonne and Biarritz, but upon their arrival Saturday night the entire force promptly joined the guerillas.

Reports from the Continent tonight said French guerillas had been working hand-in-hand with the invading Allies since D-day, striking so savagely at enemy communications that the Germans were forced to multiply guards on rails and roads.

Harrass Enemy's Rear

Responsible French headquarters said communications were paralyzed in Savoy and Jure while patriots harrassed the enemy's rear in Bhittany and in the Pyrenees and sabotaged rail lines in Cote d'or.

The free Danish press service reported four German mine-sweepers were sunk by Danish saboteurs in Svendborg harbor yesterday.

(A dispatch from Bern said the underground had fooled the Germans into arresting numerous collaborators in Paris by substituting their names for those of underground leaders in police records. The dispatch to the Swedish newspaper Nya Dagligt Allehanda was reported to OWI.)

Montgomery Acts to Obtain Navy Project

Montgomery County Commissioners yesterday decided to appear before the Naval Affairs Committee in support of the Navy's intention to construct a five million dollar laboratory in the county.

The action was taken when it was learned that Representative Sasscer (D., Md.), who represents Prince Georges County, is aiding in the movement to locate the plant in Prince Georges.

Beall Urges Action

J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.), who represents Montgomery County, appeared before the commissioners and urged them to act.

Beall said that Representative Lansdale Sasscer is seeking to have the project located in Prince Georges. The second site under consideration is in Virginia.

The board agreed to appear with Beall before a hearing on the matter by the Naval Affairs Committee, of which Representative Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) is chairman.

Beall told the board he was assured by the Navy Department that the building would be "purely a chemical research laboratory" and not an industrial center. The laboratory will employ between 500 and 600 "skilled professionals," he said, adding that "the employes would be of the desirable type."

Prince Georges County residents maintain that the Government now owns 10,000 acres of land in that section of the State and have already protested against the Montgomery site.

In asking the commissioners to appear before the Naval Affairs Committee, Beall said, "Don't let this opportunity go by without effort on your part or Maryland may lose it altogether."

Recreational Project Begun In Fairfax

Arlington, Fairfax Bureau of The Post. Arlington, Va. Tel. CH. 3239.

Chairman Bennett King announced the completion of plans for the summer program of the Fairfax Recreation Committee yesterday and said registration was begun yesterday. No fee is charged.

With the Town Council's appropriation of $375 voted at its last meeting, total funds available for the project amount to $750. Robert Mavity, county supervisor of playgrounds, is now endeavoring to secure the services of Franklin Rockwell, of Romney, W. Va., as director.

Recreation for all Groups

The Fairfax Recreation Committee hopes to develop the center into one offering recreation for all groups and ages.

The proposed program includes: softball for small children, older boys and girls, and adults; baseball for older boys and men; volley ball; sandbox, swings, see-saws and slides for small children; paddle tennis for youths and adults; basketball clinics for youths; sewing for girls; art instruction; handicrafts; pet show; dancing for older groups; hiking club; movies at frequent intervals; band concerts and picnics. A job service for persons in the community wanting help in cutting grass, running errands, or staying with children, will be maintained.

A definite schedule of events will be announced at an early date.

Sponsor Benefit Film

McLean Bethel Job's Daughters, is sponsoring a benefit showing of "The Pied Piper," starring Monty Wooley and Joan Bennett, at the Parish Hall tonight at 8. A technicolor cartoon will also be shown.

Outcome of Councilmanic Race Awaited by Alexandria Voters

Alexandrians waited last night to learn whether a newcomer to politics, Aubra N. Shuman, could defeat a three-time councilman, Paul Lyne Delaney, as the polls for City Council elections in six wards were prepared to close at 8:34 p. m. Token votes were accorded the unopposed candidates in the five remaining wards while the count in the Second Ward was prolonged by Shuman's call for strict adherence to the Code of Virginia Election Laws.

Interest in the result was highlighted by Shuman's warning to three judges in his precinct, issued as election day dawned, that the custom of opening mail ballots from absentee voters and depositing them in the ballot box before the close of the polls is a violation of Section 214 of the code. He asserted:

"If you open these ballots as has been the custom in the past, and deposit them in the ballot box before all regular votes have been cast during the day, I am going to enjoin you from certifying the results of this election."

He promised that during the election and before the mail ballots were opened and deposited in the box, he or some representative of his would be on hand to challenge most of the mail ballots cast in the ward.

Marked interest in the election was shown in only the Second Ward and the unopposed candidates in th eremaining five wards received only token votes. Election judges said that Shuman's requirement that absentee ballots remain uncounted until the 8:34 p. m. closing time would delay the election returns until nearly midnight.

Eisenhower's message to his troops as distributed by the Associated Press follows:

Outcome of Councilmanic Race Awaited by Alexandria Voters

Alexandrians waited last night to learn whether a newcomer to politics, Aubra N. Shuman, could defeat a three-time councilman, Paul Lyne Delaney, as the polls for City Council elections in six wards were prepared to close at 8:34 p. m. Token votes were accorded the unopposed candidates in the five remaining wards while the count in the Second Ward was prolonged by Shuman's call for strict adherence to the Code of Virginia Election Laws.

Interest in the result was highlighted by Shuman's warning to three judges in his precinct, issued as election day dawned, that the custom of opening mail ballots from absentee voters and depositing them in the ballot box before the close of the polls is a violation of Section 214 of the code. He asserted:

"If you open these ballots as has been the custom in the past, and deposit them in the ballot box before all regular votes have been cast during the day, I am going to enjoin you from certifying the results of this election."

He promised that during the election and before the mail ballots were opened and deposited in the box, he or some representative of his would be on hand to challenge most of the mail ballots cast in the ward.

Marked interest in the election was shown in only the Second Ward and the unopposed candidates in th eremaining five wards received only token votes. Election judges said that Shuman's requirement that absentee ballots remain uncounted until the 8:34 p. m. closing time would delay the election returns until nearly midnight.

Platform Issues

By Wendell Willkie

Social Security

In the third article of his series about national issues confronting the platform-drafters of the Republican Party, Wendell Willkie discusses "Social Security." On the eve of the GOP National Convention in Chicago, Mr. Willkie was asked by a number of newspapers to express his views about what he considers the major issues of the coming Presidential campaign. His articles were made available for general distribution to the American press.

A FREE ECONOMY, by its nature, entails a certain amount of fluctuation and risk. As a matter of fact, much of its strength and its very freedoms are directly related to its risks. But one cannot enjoy the freedoms of such a society without a minimum of economic security. Therefore the risks must be spread sufficiently to guarantee that all members of society are protected against the final economic disaster of going without the bare necessities of life. This is the function of the social insurances.

We have too often been led to regard the social insurances as the opposite rather than the supplement of our enterprise system. We have been presented with them as alternatives. Do you want security or initiative? Do you want protection or adventure?

This is a factitious issue. We need both. Indeed we cannot have one without the other. We cannot have security in terms of an advancing standard of living without enterprise. We cannot have the initiative and energy we need for an expanding economy without preserving and increasing the vigor of our human resources.

OUR PRESENT social security laws are inadequate for this purpose. The proposed Wagner-Murray-Dignell bill contains some of the essentials of an inclusive social security program. But unfortunately it is in many respects poorly conceived and perpetuates the inequities of the present law. Taxes still fall most heavily upon the lowest paid workers, while benefits are largest to the most highly paid. Coverage is still incomplete and eligibility rules are complicated.

Need knows no rules of eligibility or coverage. Protection against old age, illness and economic misfortune must be a right for everyone. Benefits must be adequate to provide a minimum sustenance in health and decency, regardless of a man's previous earnings. This is important not alone to the individual, but to assure the relative stability of our consumer industries and agricultural production and the well-being of our whole society.

COMPLETE MEDICAL care should be available to all. But any plan adopted today should be sufficiently flexible to allow for experimentation and growth, and in any program of public medicine the value of the practicing physician's relationship to his patient must be recognized. Adequate provision must be made for building facilities where none now exist, for developing health and diagnostic centers, and for funds for research and medical education.

Another form of insurance that is of outstanding importance for the relatively stable functioning of our free economy is an adequate and uniform system of Federal unemployment insurance. Today we have 51 separate laws governing unemployment compensation. Our economy is too interdependent to allow this division of responsibility to continue. The present tax collection machinery, Federal for some insurances, State for others, with duplication of records, is wasteful, costly and time consuming. And benefit rates vary widely and are inadequate.

The postwar reconversion strain will fall unevenly on the States. In this crucial period we shall need the stabilizing influence of uniform standards and procedures, and of adequate benefits fixed, not according to former wages, but on the basis of a regional cost of living, to cover bare necessities.

FOR A long time our society left the education of children to the individual parent's ability to pay. Then it made a decision which changed civilization. It decided that all children should be educated, regardless of their parents' income.

We are now faced with another decision as logical and as necessary, about which we must begin to think. We have left the feeding, clothing, shelter and medical care of our children to be determined by their parents' income alone. It hasn't worked and can never work, for a man whose skills may permit him to earn only the minimum wage may have five or six children to rear on that wage. No wage or income based upon the value of the economic contribution of the individual can ever be made to take into proper consideration the needs of his dependents.

The children of America are the future of America. The principles of self-preservation, no less than those of humanity, demand that we place squarely on society the responsibility of making the citizens of tomorrow healthy, energetic and educated. We should begin the moment the war is over to see that every child in America grows up with the basic necessities of education, good food, adequate clothing, medical care and a decent home.

WE, WHOSE faith is in a freely competitive society, have the special obligation of seeing that all "start fair," physically and mentally, as well equipped for the race as their natural endowment permits.

There is nothing new in providing men with minimum protection. When our society was predominantly agricultural, Abraham Lincoln's homestead laws offered to the people of the United States what was then necessary protection—land and a chance to build a home. Today when our society is predominantly industrial, the formulas must change. And all the resolutions for the preservation of the enterprise system will not do one fraction as much to preserve it as the assurance to men and women of the protections which they are rightfully demanding, protections which are basic to their time.

The Republican Party should see to it that they get them.

Southern Revolt

By Ernest Lindley

Prevent Roosevelt's Reelection

THE PURPOSES of the "Southern revolt" must be distinguished from its methods. The purposes seem to be somewhat mixed. There have been hints that some of the participants would settle for the nomination of a conservatice Vice President in place of Wallace. The price of others is higher. But there can be no doubt that the real objective of many manipulators of the "revolt" is to prevent the reelection of Roosevelt. This objective is being softpedaled, in some instances, because if it were openly proclaimed it would alienate some who are accessories in the "revolt."

LINDLEY

The wire-pullers in each State seem to be a coterie of anti-Roosevelt ians—wealthy planters, capitalists, lawyers and other employes of Northern corporations, some of whom have more or less openly supported the Republicans in recent presidential elections. The chief implement with which they are rounding up a certain amount of popular support is the race issue.

THESE ARE familiar political tactics. They failed this year in such States as Alabama and Florida, where they had to pass the test of a primary. They are more easily effected in the States in which popular participation in party management is severely restricted.

No one questions the right of Southern delegations to go to the Democratic National Convention to oppose the renomination of Roosevelt or of Wallace, or to support any kind of platform they may prefer. No one questions their right to withdraw if they do not get what they want, as the Bull Moosers did from the Republican convention in 1912, and to nominate and support another candidate.

What gives the "Southern revolt" it's sinister aspect is the freeing of presidential electors. This is an attack on the roots of our democratic system. It violates the constitutional custom of more than a century.

THERE HAVE been repeated proposals to abolish the Electoral College, not only because it is an anachronism but because it is not sufficiently democratic. It is not sufficiently democratic because it is possible for a presidential nominee who receives a majority of the popular vote to fall short of a majority of the electoral college. Despite this unfairness, the electoral college has been tolerated—but only because it has ceased to exercise any independence. It became long ago a formal channel for registering, State by State, the choices of the voters.

If sundry Democrats in the South wish to vote against a Republican without supporting Roosevelt in November, let them nominate Senator Byrd or some other candidate to their liking. Then the people will know for whom they are voting. The device contrived by the manipulators of the "Southern rebellion" is obviously intended to frustrate a clear popular choice. It is intended to confuse, to make it as difficult as possible for the Southerners who want Roosevelt to vote for him. And there is little reason to doubt that a majority of the voters in every Southern State would prefer him to a Republican.

The weakness in the method of the "Southern revolt" is that it is too obviously a piece of trickery. It is like the brilliant Republican idea of some years ago for defeating Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska by nominating a grocer with exactly the same name. It is altogether improbable that the voters of the South, whatever they think of Roosevelt, will tolerate the methods of the "Southern revolt."

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Recognition Of Bolivia

WORLD AFFAIRS press heavily on Cordell Hull, our Secretary of State. So many things claim his attention that lesser problems must now and then escape his eye.

CHILDS

Surely, this explains why we have not yet recognized the government of Major Villaroel in Bolivia. It must be oversight. I would make bold to call it to Mr. Hull's attention.

For it is not a lesser problem. Our prestige in Latin America has been slipping—and slipping fast. The State Department policy, or lack of policy, toward Bolivia is helping to push it lower.

In the revolutionary group that came into power last December, there were some pro-Nazis. When, however, it was pointed out that these elements were an obstacle to recognition by the other American republics, Major Villaroel acted quickly. He kicked them out.

Then he went further. At the risk of dislocating Bolivia's economy, which over the years had been infiltrated with Germans and Japanese, he ordered 81 Axis nationals rounded up and they were shipped to the United States in American military planes.

That was a serious step. Many of these men, particularly Germans, had lived in Bolivia for years. They regarded themselves as Bolivians. They controlled important firms. Yet they were swept up and hustled off to internment camps.

VILLAROEL SENT his Minister of Labor, Victor Andrade, to the United States to present the case for Bolivian recognition. Andrade made a deep impression on the Government officials and the labor leaders whom he met here. Eloquently he pleaded that his country be allowed to join the other democratic nations in her struggle for democratic statehood.

This is a long way for proud Latins to go. They feel they have come on bended knee, asking for what they believe is only their just due.

All of this was substantiated in the report which Ambassador Avra Warren made to Secretary Hull. He was sent from his post in Panama to Bolivia to study what had happened there. Having seen a digest of his report, I can say that it supports most of the Villaroel claims.

And, too, there is the fact that at least four Latin-American nations—Brazil, Colombia, Chile and Mexico—want to recognize the Villaroel regime. They are waiting for us to take the lead.

IN THE FACE of all this, the State Department still holds back. The report is that we're waiting for the elections on July 2—that we intend to see whether Villaroel will get a popular majority.

It may be, of course, that the State Department is proceeding with more than ordinary caution to make sure of the concerted opinion of all the republics south of our border before acting. But one thing should be plainly understood: Recognition after the election will be too late. It is now that the pro-democratic elements around Major Villaroel need the assurance of our support.

All indications are that the democratic regime which is successfully organizing Bolivia's shattered economy will come through either with or without us. It's our gain in this critical period to demonstrate that we stand with the forces of the future.

In the brief time I spent in Bolivia last fall, I saw such contrasts between wealth and poverty as I did not know existed outside of India. Half-starved Indians walk barefoot outside the walls of the palaces of the mine owners.

It seemed to me to be a fertile breeding ground for the totalitarian extreme of fascism or communism. If Major Vallaroel has been able to rally the forces of democracy, as he seems to have done, then his government deserves instant recognition.

We must not ignore danger signals. Too often we have backed the mine owners—the status quo—whether they were right or wrong. The other day one of our Brazilian good neighbors spoke in warning of the resentments developing in Latin America. In Bolivia there is a chance, unless we delay too long, to show our good intentions.

The Gallup Poll

Dewey Holds Slight Margin Over Roosevelt in Michigan

By George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., June 13.—If Thomas E. Dewey were the Republican presidential candidate and Franklin D. Roosevelt the Democratic candidate, as of today Michigan would go into the Dewey column.

That is the finding of an intensive Gallup survey covering all parts of Michigan. Field reporters for the Poll asked voters in Dewey's native state, carefully selected to represent the state's entire voting population, to choose between Governor Dewey and President Roosevelt on the basis that the election were being held today with these men as the respective candidates.

Here is a tabulation of replies showing the standing of the two men among civilian voters in Michigan:

DEWEY	54%
ROOSEVELT	46

The present poll indicates a continuing trend away from Roosevelt in the state of Michigan. The trend started after the presidential election of 1936, when Roosevelt carried Michigan by a comfortable majority.

In 1940 Michigan provided percentagewise the closest state race in the presidential election, going to Wendell Willkie by only about two-tenths of one per cent of the vote cast by major party voters. Willkie's plurality in Michigan was less than 7,000, although the vote cast was over two million.

The trend away from Roosevelt since 1936 is shown in the following table comparing the percentage of the major party vote going to him in 1936 and 1940 with the findings in today's state-wide survey:

	Percentage of Roosevelt Vote
1936	59.2%
1940	49.8
TODAY	46

Democratic leaders are aware that their chief support will come from industrial areas such as Detroit. Their big problem, no matter who the candidates may be, will thus be to assure a heavy turnout at the polls in the industrial areas on election day.

Recent state-wide surveys among civilian voters in New York, Pennsylvania and Illinois show the following results:

	F.D.R.	Dewey
New York	48%	52%
Pennsylvania	52	48
Illinois	47	53

First Invasion Films Ready for Release; Amusement Gossip

THE NEWSREELS will be the biggest pictures on the screens when the new bills open in the downtown picture houses tomorrow and Friday.

They will be devoted to the Normandy invasion and the breaching of Hitler's vaunted West Wall of what he vainglioriously calls his Fortress Europe. Not by proxy, not in rehearsal, not by Hollywood actors impersonating Allied troops, but the real thing.

JANE WYMAN

Flim exposed on the Normandy beaches and as the attacking forces plowed inland in the face of withering fire, have been pouring into the United States since last Thursday——record time, all circumstances considered.

Participating in the filming were cameramen from the Army, Navy, Air Forces, Coast Guard and Canadian film units. The pictures begin at the ports of embarkation and take-off fields in England, progress across the Channel, follow the landings of the first wave of ground forces and air-borne fighters, and carry the action to the capture of the first French towns adjacent to the beachhead.

It is a grim, blody and inspiring spectacle, and this is not hearsay.

A small invited audience viewed the "Invasion Extra" edition of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "News of the Day" yesterday afternoon and shared the excitement of a vicarious personal presence with the assault troops. Only one reel long, this release, going on the Loew screens tomorrow, packs into its limited fotage the salient "clips" from thousands of feet of official films flown back to this country direct from the fighting front.

The commentary, incidentally, is delivered by Quentin Reynolds, who, for the greater part, lets the pictures tell their own story.

And what a story!

Preceding this first flash of the greatest military undertaking in history, the drama desks had previewed the M-G-M production of "The Whie Cliffs of Dover," a perfect prelude to the stark heroism of the newsreel. Starring Irene Dunne, with Alan Marshal, Frank Morgan, Gladys Cooper, Sir C. Aubrey Smith, Roddy Mc Dowell, aDme May Whitty and others of equal note in support, this subject, produced by Sidney Franklin and directed by Clarence Brown, falls immediately into the same exalted category as "Mrs. Miniver" and "Random Harvest." It is a picture of impeccable quality, rich in emotional content and acted with superlative excellence. It will be coming along in due course to the Palace screen. When it does, it will take a high place among the "musts." A friendly hint to the more sensitive among the picturegoers would be to tuck a few extra handkerchiefs into or wherever. "The White Cliffs" tugs pretty vigorously at the heart now and again. It was thoughtful of Eastern Division Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's to sandwich (figuratively speaking) a Lucullan luncheon in between the Cliffs of Dover and those of Normandy.

Wit those newsreels to look forward to, it is probably unimportant that new pictures will be comparatively few in the midcity area come this weekend. On Thursday, RKO-Keith's will be breaking out "The Impostor," starring the long invisible Jean Gabin, and on Friday, the Earle will be giving Washington its first glimpse of "Make Your Own Bed," in which Jack Carson, Jane Wyman and a likely cast of farceurs have a load of agonizing fun with the help-shortage problem. For the est, the new week's film fare will consist principally of holdovers and repeats.

At Fresno Frolic

It is quite a show they are putting on tonight down Monument Grounds way in conjunction with the "Shot from the Sky" exposition of captured enemy war equipment, designed to add impetus to the Fifth War Loan drive. With the Bob Hawk "Thanks to the Yanks" company at its base, the program also will include the Earl Lindsay Lovely Ladies and Jerry Wayne from the current stage revue at Loew's Capitol Theater, and the 100-piece Air Force Band. With Lynn Gardner, vocalist, and Burt Ives, folk-singer, of the Hawk unit, and Corpl. Glenn Davis, baritone, formerly with the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company, that adds up to quite a bundle of entertainment.

The Army Air Force Band is a complete and competent entertainment unit all by itself. A far cry, as the saying goes, from the usual "military band," this organization is patterned more to the Kostelanetz or Raymond Paige design, with vocal chorus trimmings remindful of Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians. The band, furthermore, enjoys the services of Pfc. Will Beittel as its chief arranger. For five years prior to his present duties, Beittel was staff arranger for the Lucky Strike Hit Parade program. The glee club is under the direction of Sergt. Harry Rantsch, former aranger with Glenn Miller's orchestra. The AAF Band will be playing at the "Shot From the Sky" show throughout its run, as well as participating in numerous other Fifth War Loan activities. As we were saying, it's worth hearing all by itself, having in its membership representatives of 32 different symphony orchestras, 38 "name" bands and schooled musicians who have played under 25 famous conductors.

HEDDA HOPPER

Major Gable's First

Hollywood, Calif., June 13.—Since there's nothing standing in the way of Clark Gable making a picture, a dozen stories have been written about what he'd do first. Everything from "Seattle" to "Green Mansions" has been mentioned. But his first will be "Saint Dismas," written by Casey Robinson, to be produced by Cliff Reid. It's a powerful drama, and one of the best scripts Metro's ever had. It's about the hoodlum saint. . . . Bing Crosby and Frank Tuttle insist upon an unknown for the role of John L. Sullivan. The best test made so far is a fellow named Dale Easton, former college football player, who's done bits and pieces in pictures and little theaters. He has a physique better than Atlas, I'm told. . . . Constance Bennett says, "I'm not responsible for misinformation going out about me. There will be no divorce between Gilbert Roland and myself. We're perfectly happy." Then she added, "Being a producer is quite a chore. Now people ask me all the millions of questions I used to annoy the producers with. I'm getting my own back with interest!" She's engaged Zoe Akins to write the screen play of "Paris Underground."

CONSTANCE BENNETT

Like Kindergarten

Cary Grant and Rita Hayworth are "titting and tatting." Rita wouldn't make "Curly" with him. Now he doesn't want to do "Chautauqua" with her. . . . Would it surprise you if Sonja H——'s next picture for Bill Goetz isn't about skating? . . . Dinah Shore's won another singing poll. Billboard named her as the school kids' favorite singer by more than four to one. Bing Crosby won men's race, although closely pursued by Frank Sinatra. . . . To Elsa Maxwell goes the credit for getting Greta Garbo out of her own dog house and into the public eye. When Elsa makes up her mind, she really can give out with expert advice. . . . John Brahms becomes a master of psychology. He did "The Lodger," "Guest in the House," and now "Hangover Square." If he's not careful, he'll get in a rut.

Love, Love, Love

Love has been a little late this year. Johnny Conte, who will marry Marilyn Maxwell, didn't visit Fanny Brice's set when they both worked at Metro. Johnny and Fanny were so close for years most of their friends thought they were married. . . . Anna Lee marries her handsome aviator June 29, and Jack Haley's daughter Gloria, who married Capt. Lewis Parchia several months ago, is here visiting the family. . . . Arthur Freed's first for Ray Bolger will have a Mexican background. . . . A soldier asked Leo Gorcey if he'd pose for a picture. Leo said, "Sure." Then G. I. said, "Okay, lie down in the gutter. That's how I always picture you." And I'll be darned if Leo didn't do it. . . . Brynie Foy tells me "Rip Goes to War" is definitely off, but "Commando Kelly" is still on. In spite of what you may think, studios haven't lost a penny on war pictures.

Broadway Bulletins

New York, June 13.—At a press conference in Steve Early's office last week, one newspaperman brought up the subject of Mint Juleps. The reporters had heard that "Pa" Watson is a specialist at mixing a Mint Julep . . . "How does Watson make a Mint Julep?" Early was asked . . . "When he makes them at his home," said Early, "he shows you the ingredients—especially the bottle of 18-year-old Bourbon. Then he goes into the kitchen to make the drink, first putting away the bottle of Bourbon, and substitutes 4-year-old Rye.".

Vice President Wallace will see the President on the Wednesday before the convention. And the President is making the arrangements for the reception celebrating Wallace's homecoming . . . John Roy Carlson, author of "Under Cover," is writing another book of exposes . . . De Gaulle's broadcasts from England will be "in the name of the French government" . . . The friends of the late Sergt. Gregor Duncan, the newspaper artist who was killed in Italy last week, are organizing a memorial committee to establish a fellowship to be awarded to a promising young artist, and a medal to be awarded to the best cartoonist.

Elliott Paul, the capricious author of "The Last Time I Saw Paris," gave a party for his friends at Barney Gallant's. He ordered the courses one day in advance. When Paul arrived with his party at the appointed hour, 7 p. m., he was disappointed to learn that the dessert he had ordered—Banana Flamboy, made of imported gin and bananas—couldn't be had. "I have the imported gin," Gallant told him, "but no bananas" . . . Paul left his guests there and went banana hunting. He went to the home of an old friend, an Italian who had a fruit stand on upper Park ave. The fruit dealer reopened his closed stand and sold him a bunch of bananas. At 11 p. m., four hours late, Paul's guests were served Banana Flamboy.

In the next Issue of the Ladies' Home Journal, Eleanor Roosevelt will reveal that the small amount of money she inherited from her parents is held by the Bank of N. Y., brings her a very small income, and that therefore she must earn any money she wishes to use for charitable purposes. "I have never invested any money," says what I earn should be spent to Mrs. Roosevelt, "because I feel that help others or to give useful employment" . . . Mrs. Colin McKenzie was a teacher at Arthur Murray's. Now, because of the fighting in the South Pacific, she is on a lecture tour, because she's a native of Samoa and knows about the battle areas . . . For the Washington Future Book: When Chief Justice Stone retires, Jimmy Byrnes will succeed him.

The Netherlands Indies army reported to the Knickerbocker Weekly of the enlistment of Edward Vliet, a 21-year-old Hollander who, until last November, didn't know his country was at war. Vliet lived on a farm in a remote section of northern Queensland. In 1940 he heard of a war between England and Germany. Last November he discovered an old newspaper from which he learned that Holland, too, was at war. Vliet immediately mounted his horse for a 250-mile trip to Cairns. From there he hitch-hiked 1600 miles to Melbourne, a five-month trip. He went directly to the recruiting office and explained why he was four years late.

Senator Josh Lee of Oklahoma was in Sherman Billingsley's Stork Club the other night and learned that when he was there last John Steinbeck was in the room. "Sorry I didn't meet Steinbeck," said Senator Lee. "His 'Grapes of Wrath' was a good and important book. It was unfortunate, of course, that California got the grapes and Oklahoma the wrath" . . . Carl Brisson, after breaking records at the Versailles, leaves this week for Canada's night clubs.

Nature Favors the SOUTH!

. . . in soil . . . And today the varied, fertile soils of the South are helping to sustain our nation fighting for its way of life. In this rich area agricultural products range from sub-tropic fruits and vegetables in Florida to the grain fields and apple orchards of Virginia.

Where once the principal crop was cotton, diversification is now the order of the day and the South takes high rank in the production of a wide variety of farm crops, in dairying, poultry raising, livestock and in the growing of fruits and vegetables.

The Seaboard Railway through its Agricultural Development Department has contributed substantially to the growth of the South's agriculture. In coming days, the Seaboard will actively assist in the further development of the rich farming resources of its territory.

Montgomery Board Weighs Airport Plan

Plans to construct an airport as a private enterprise on Rockville Pike, near Norbeck, Md., were submitted yesterday to the Montgomery County, Board of Commissioners at Rockville by Lieut. Henry Heyman, USNR, assigned to the Naval Research Laboratory in Washington.

The board agreed to advertise hearings on the proposed project, which would take in 116 acres on the old Bogeley farm, before granting a permit to Lieutenant Heyman and his brother, William Heyman, employed in the Martin airplane plant. Lieutenant Heyman pointed out that there are few airports with facilities to accommodate private flying, which he said would increase after the war.

A budget of $3,534,458.25 for the fiscal year beginning July 1 was adopted. The tax rate of $1.50 per $100 assessed valuation will stand.

Harold Andrew Treadwell, Silver Spring, and Sheldon J. Jenkins, Kensington, were appointed emergency policeman, and Carol V. Policeman Jack Berry applied for retirement due to physical disability. His case was referred to the county police trial board. Resignations of Fred B. Johnson, emergency policeman, and Carol V. Jones, regular policeman, were accepted. Both men will enter business.

The board granted a permit to the Silver Spring Lions Club to hold a charity carnival on Georgia ave., Silver Spring, June 17 through July 17. It also gave a permit to the Gaithersburg Odd Fellows' Lodge to hold a card party June 22.

Dodd Reappointed

The town council of Takoma Park has reappointed J. Wilson town clerk and treasurer at a salary of $3800, an increase of $200 over his 1943-44 salary, Mayor Oliver W. Youngblood announced yesterday.

Maj. William F. Fischer reappointed superintendent of public works, was given an increase of $600, making his annual pay $3000. The town's three policemen, Lieut. C. E. Thomas, Sergt. Charles Seek and Corpl. George Altman, whose salaries range from $175 to $210 a month, including clothing allowances, were reappointed. Byron Souder, on military leave, also was renamed.

No opposition was voiced at the town's increase in the tax rate to $1 per $100 assessed valuation, effective July 1, at the council's meeting Monday night. The rate has been 78 cents.

Chest Meeting Friday

The 1935 budgets of all county agencies of the Montgomery County Community Chest will be presented at a joint meeting of the chest's budget and executive committees Friday at 7:30 p. m. in the assembly room of the Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, Md. William N. Morell and J. Harry Welch, chairmen of the executive and budget committees, respectively, will be in charge of the session. Mary E. Lucas, executive secretary, will present the budgets.

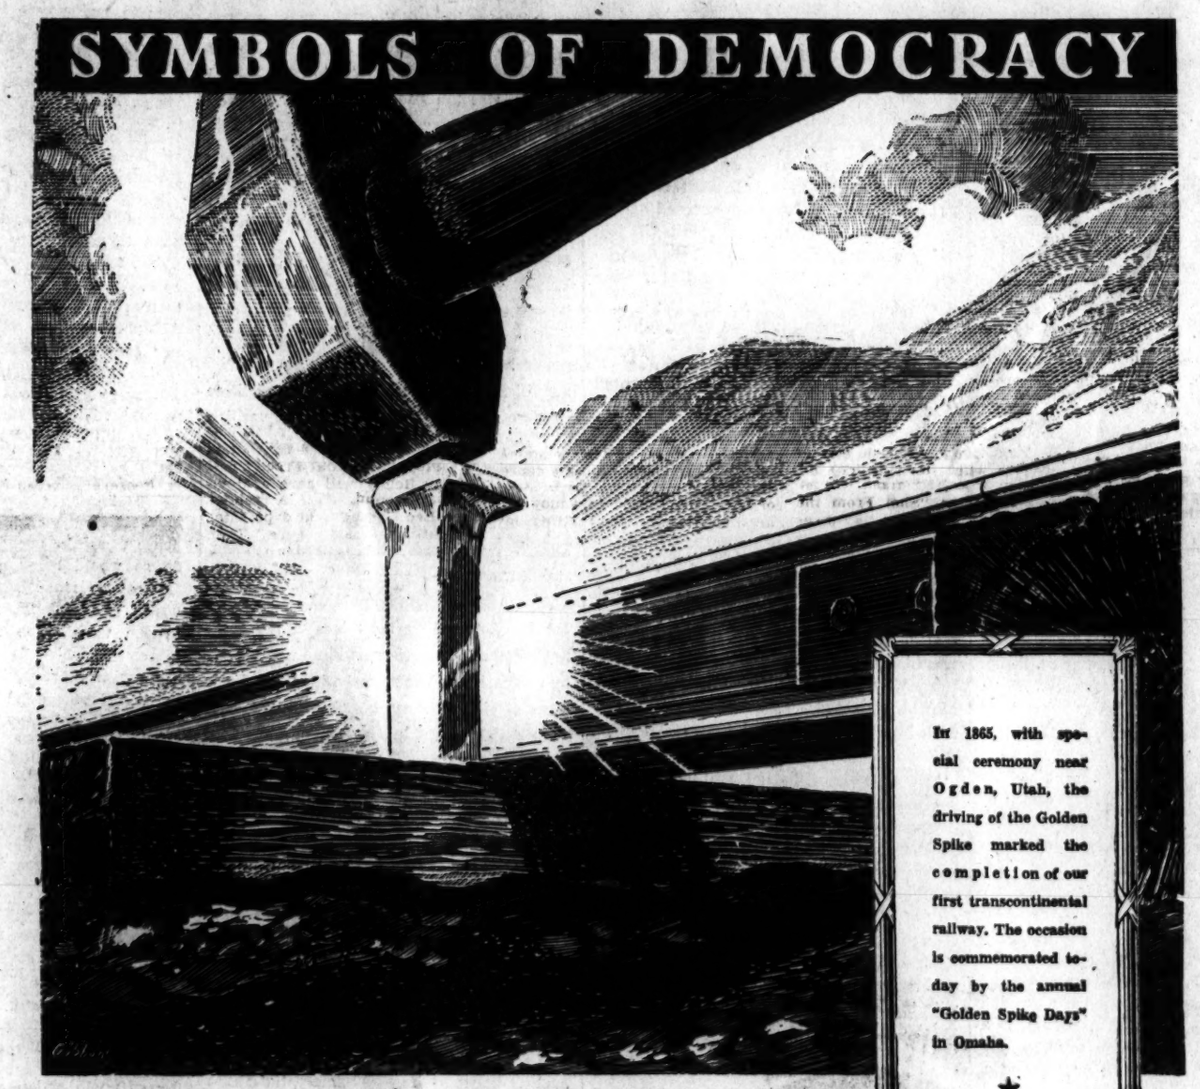
SYMBOLS OF DEMOCRACY



In 1865, with special ceremony near Ogden, Utah, the driving of the Golden Spike marked the completion of our first transcontinental railway. The occasion is commemorated today by the annual "Golden Spike Days" in Omaha.

Veterans' Preference

Last week one of our contributors quoted a veteran at Walter Reed Annex, Lieut. Howard Christenson, as saying that he had had trouble getting WPB to give him priorities for equipment to operate his Oklahoma farm. We are now informed that the War Food Administration had issued to county farm rationing committees three weeks earlier an order granting preference to veterans who need farm equipment. The only condition is that such preference shall not interfere with the maximum production of war foods. We are glad to publicize this information. But to us the important fact is that Lieut. Christenson, and probably many other soldiers who are about to be discharged, had experienced difficulty in getting started again in civilian life. Further, they are not prepared to deal with the complexities of our Government agencies in solving their problems. The main point of the article in question was that veterans are afraid that the civilians who stayed behind have passed them by while they were off fighting for their country. They feel quite rightly that they deserve a break in getting started again. Where they have received preference, as in the acquisition of farm equipment, they should be informed of the fact by some sort of counseling system. They will be frustrated all too often when they return to civilian life without the addition of needless irritation due to inadequate channels of information.

Norman Times

It has been said of the Pacific war that it has provided Americans with an excellent, if somewhat expensive, education in geography. It could be said of the European war that for those who have time to look up the associations, the very place names afford an excellent course in history. This has been true from the beginning. Cracow, Warsaw, Lemberg are storied names. Sedan is a name of doubly tragic memories. Flanders is perhaps the most famous and familiar battleground of history, watered by the blood of successive generations of armies. Dunkirk (or if you prefer, Dunkerque) had its special place in English annals centuries long before 1940. The Greek, African, Sicilian and Italian campaigns have taken us over ancient soil indeed.

With the current struggle for Normandy, a new set of associations opened, for Normandy, too, has had its full share of the turmoil and bloodshed that is the raw material of history. This is by no means the first time that Normandy has been invaded from the sea. The very name, indeed, is a momento of an invasion from overseas, for it derives from the Normen or Northmen who wrested the land from the Frankish lords. The word, of course, is also associated with the last successful invasion of England, nearly 900 years ago. In the course of a few hundred years the name Norman etched itself very deeply into the history of a good many lands in many parts of the world—in Italy, in Sicily, in Africa, in Ireland, in Byzantium, in Antioch, in the Holy Land.

Under the Angevin kings, England and Normandy were really one and not for centuries would the descendants of Norman William give up their claims to Normandy. It was to collect this claim that Edward III invaded Normandy in 1346 and seized Caen. Throughout most of the Hundred Years War a great part of Normandy remained in English hands. It was in Normandy, at Rouen, that they burned St. Joan of Arc. Again, in the Wars of Religion, Normandy was one of the great battlegrounds for both the Protestants and the Royalists. The place for which the British now are battling, Caen, and, until its seizure by partisans of Guise, Rouen, were strongly Protestant, and it was in Normandy, at Arques, that the final and most famous of battle of those wars was fought. In French Revolutionary times, Normandy was one of several strongholds of the Girondist, or Federalist, faction. It was from Caen that Charlotte Corday, a descendant of the great Norman tragic poet, Corneille, set out for Paris to slay the tyrant Marat. It was to Caen that the Girondist deputies who managed to escape the Terror fled for refuge and sympathy.

Probably of all various kinds of Frenchmen, the Norman is best known to Americans who have never been in France, although he is, of course, quite unlike the volatile, demonstrative Norman of British and American stage tradition. As he appears in many of the tales of Maupassant, the Norman peasant is not always attractive, but there is general agreement among those who know him best that he has been more truthfully reflected in the much-loved pictures of the great Norman painter, Jean Francois Millet.

Defending The Line

Price control, like peace, is indivisible. It cannot be breached here or there without affecting the stability of our whole economy. Inflation is no more susceptible to localization than is war. Yet Congress has been playing perilously with inflation—as though we could afford to have a little of it, as though it could be channeled for the benefit of particular constituents without endangering the security of the national constituency as a whole. The Senate did this with the Bankhead amendments. The House is following suit with other retreats before the demands of special interest groups.

We know of nothing more pointed and pertinent to say on this score than what was said on the House floor on Monday by Representative Jesse Wolcott of Michigan:

> We must take into consideration that we are legislating in respect to a broader field than just watermelons or tobacco or cotton or any other particular product. We are legislating here today in respect to inflation, to the general price line. If you break through that price line you start the spiral. Whether you start it with cotton goods, whether you start it with textiles, whether you start it with sugar beets or coffee or wherever you start it, does not make any difference. If you start it, then it is going to get out of control . . . You must have the courage today to stand up and tell these constituents of yours that you are here not only to represent them in their selfish motives, you are here to represent every living soul in the United States, and you are here to protect the Constitution of the United States and this economy in order that we will have something after this war instead of economic chaos.

Mr. Wolcott spoke as a sort of convert—and with added impressiveness on that account. He asked the House if this reasoning did not "sound rather peculiar coming from me, coming from me who has denounced the administration of price control as I have?" It does not sound at all peculiar to us. The control of inflation is no more a matter for partisanship than the provision of equipment for our armed forces. Administration supporters have been striving valiantly to knock down the repeated thrusts at the Price Control Act. They can succeed only if Republican critics like Mr. Wolcott will join hands with them. If they do not succeed, inflation will engulf Democrats and Republicans without distinction.

After One Week

"The beaches," said Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery, commander in chief of the Allied ground forces in France, "are now behind us." Since the deepest Allied penetration—in the vicinity of St. Lo—is only 16 miles, Gen. Montgomery's remark would seem, at first glance, to be overoptimistic. Yet the facts bear him out. The Allied position in France since D-Day has been sufficiently consolidated and reinforced to be more than reasonably secure against enemy attack. A dramatic indication of this fact was the visit made to the liberated corner of France by Prime Minister Churchill, Field Marshal Smuts and a galaxy of high ranking Allied military and naval leaders on Monday.

The Allies have, indeed, real reason to be enormously gratified by what has been accomplished in the eight days since D-Day. In that brief period our forces succeeded in breaking through the powerful defenses of the Atlantic Wall. They have pushed on until they are today wthin gun range of Cherbourg, and the entire Cherbourg peninsula may soon be in Allied hands. The cost has not been light, except in comparison with the losses that had been anticipated. A great deal of heavy fighting is still ahead. We have still to meet the impact of the main body of the enemy. But with each passing day our strength in France grows and our capacity to resist German counterattacks grows with it. In due course the beachhead we have seized and expanded will become the staging point for an assault the purpose of which will be to destroy the enemy's fighting power.

That is still for the future. But in girding their loins for the grim task that lies ahead, the Allies have the assurance and the confidence that comes from having done the initial tasks fully and well.

Liberation Money

Before D-Day this newspaper warned that one reason for recognizing the Algiers government was the need to associate some French authority with the economic decisions to be made when our forces landed on French soil. We pointed particularly to the problem of the currency. Our troops had to be paid in local currency, as they are in Italy, and, since we hadn't recognized any French authority, that currency would have to be issued under Allied (minus French) authority. This is what has happened. Our Allied armies have entered France supplied with franc notes issued without any French backing or authority. Of course, it has been necessary to establish rates of exchange with the dollar and the pound. What those rates ought to be is a question that is virtually impossible of determination. The franc rate is said to have been set at approximately 2 cents in American money. The London Economist pointed out in its issue of February 5 that the long divorce of occupied Europe from contacts with a free economy made it extremely difficult to arrive at any estimates of the correct parities of the franc or any other European currencies. However, necessity dictates the establishment of a provisional rate. If the occupation moneys that will supplement local currencies inevitably add to the existing inflation that has occurred under Nazi domination, that cannot be helped.

The Economist warns against possible efforts of the French authorities, when they take over in France, to put too high a value on the franc in terms of dollars and pounds. Prestige, it is said, might dictate such a course. In that event, of course, the French would be inviting a deflation crisis that might have serious consequences. We don't share these fears. The French people have a tremendous stake in preserving the purchasing power of their currency from further deterioration. They hold savings in the form of francs, and they own government bonds. They will wish, as we do, to prevent the expansion of currency and of liquid debt claims from becoming the basis for a demoralizing rise in prices that might bring about a catastrophic loss of franc purchasing power.

It is said that steps are being taken to preserve the internal economy of France from the demoralizing effects of uncontrolled spending by the civil population and the occupying armies. This is an essential precaution. Reports to the Economist indicate that in southern Italy the failure to impose effective bans on spending by individual soldiers, especially our highly paid soldiers, has encouraged the rise of black markets and aggravated the serious deprivations to which the civilian population has been subjected. That is an evil against which in future extraordinary precautions must be taken. Unless we do, we shall invite a lot of recrimination from the liberated, especially in France, where enough potential resentment is available as a result of our refusal to put some French authority back of our "invasion money," even to consult with the French on the details, such as the exchange rate, of the interim currency system.

Coast Guard

It gives us a good deal of pleasure to extend our congratulations to the amiable and energetic Vice Admiral Russell R. Waesche, who today enters his third four-year term as head of the United States Coast Guard. Admiral Waesche is, we believe, the first Coast Guard officer ever to hold so high a rank, and the honor is in itself a recognition of the very large and important role which has been assigned to this service in this war. Since its establishment in 1790, the Coast Guard has had some part in all the conflicts in which this Nation has been engaged, and had a considerable part in World War of 1917-18, when the number of its officers and men lost in action was proportionately greater than that of any other service. But this is the first time that its activities have taken it so far beyond those coasts of which it is the traditional guardian and policeman. The Coast Guard seems to have had some share in nearly all the campaigns involving operations by sea and an important share in those at Singapore, Tulagi, Guadalcanal, the Gilberts, Salerno and Normandy.

Although, as regards publicity and eclat, the Coast Guard perhaps is still the most neglected of the services, it in no way suffers by comparison of its record with that of any other service. The work of the Coast Guard harbor and coastal patrols is perhaps less vital now than it was in the months immediately after Pearl Harbor. But it was certainly vital then. It was the first American service to take German prisoners in this war. It was a Coast Guardsman, you will remember, who engineered the capture of the saboteurs landed on Long Island from a German submarine, and it was Coast Guard vigilance that discouraged the Nazis from landing others. It certainly did its part and a little more in the great and difficult battle that may yet prove to have been the really decisive battle of the war, namely, the Battle of the North Atlantic. In the meantime it has continued all those duties of lifebuoy tending, ice breaking, life saving and so on, which are its peacetime province, though it is probable that the revenue-collecting activities may have slumped a bit. Looking over the record, Admiral Waesche and his officers and men have every reason to be proud of their now highly ramified organization.

And, speaking of anniversaries, this is Flag Day. If the Coast Guard is a not fully appreciated service, the Flag is an utterly neglected symbol. In no other war has the Flag, as such, been given so little attention or veneration. It puzzles us why this should be so. If the United States stand for all the wonderful and worthy things that our publicists and radio orators say it does, the Flag should stand for them, too. A war without music is anomalous enough, but a war without banners is anomalous indeed.

TOAST

For lovely things that have found too soon an ending—
Even if the thread is cut, it was spun of gold;
Even if the fire is dead past all pretending
It had kept one, or two perhaps, from cold.

Even if a star has fallen and left the sky
Lonely and dark, it fell in a wave of flame;
The bubble is broken now, but it drifted high
And was more beautiful than those that came down again.

The sword is returned to the sheath while it is still bright,
And the spear is broken before it was made to bend.
Drink, and dash the glass on the stone tonight
For all lovely things that have found too soon their end.

FRANCES BROWN.

Restless Americans

By Malvina Lindsay

Veterans' Future

Most of the numerous self-constituted authorities on what the "boys" will want after this war have two pet theories. One is that the veterans will rush eagerly back to their home towns to their old jobs, to resume life in its pleasant humdrum of 1939. The other is that the returning servicemen will expect and demand an America socially, politically and economically just as it was when they went away.

If postwar planners take these theories too seriously, they may be heading for trouble. Already there are some indications that the veterans may have other ideas. One is the OWI report that only 25 per cent of discharged veterans are returning to their old jobs. Another is the interest that returning servicemen, discharged or on furlough, are showing in the technical industries of tomorrow, and the way in which the veterans who have returned to college are enrolling in technical courses. It is also significant that the returning "boys" don't want to be segregated in special schools or classes—a trend that may prove disappointing to demagogues who see all veterans having the same ideas, voting the same ticket.

But more important than these straws in the wind is the fact that Americans do not have the habit of going back to anything—except in sentiment. The social history of the United States has been one of movement, of the pioneers in covered wagons pushing on from one Western frontier to another, of their descendants in motor cars burning up the highways to get back to the East. As Margaret Mead, anthropologist, points out, most young Americans, in contrast to Europeans, leave the home town or community to build careers, establish homes, work out their destinies.

Nostalgia in Song

Thereafter they invariably sing mournfully about how they want to go back to "ole" Virginny, to the banks of the Wabash, to Iowa where the tall corn grows. In fact, as a Tin Pan Alley hero created by Ring Lardner complained, there are no States left to go back to in song. But as to going back any other way, that is out of the question. It is not the American's nature to retrace his steps—to the old State or community, to the place where he once worked, the neighborhood or apartment house where he once lived. To do so would bring a sense of frustration, make him feel he wasn't going places, getting on in the world. The feeling of movement, which he often confuses with progress, is essential to his self-esteem and happiness.

Family mansions and old homesteads are disappearing, partly because of this attitude. Rarely will the second generation, and almost never the third, live in them. It's all right to go back home on vacation during the first few years, say the employed daughters and sons in the big cities, but after that it frequently becomes a chore. That is not because of a lack of filial affection, but because the home town seems "dead" to them. It depresses them because of its memories, its cramping feel of the past, its sense of standing still. They want new scenes, new adventures.

Won't Fit Their Niches

Of course servicemen are having so much action and adventure now it might seem they would want the opposite on their return. No doubt their chief longing at present is for the blessed humdrum of home life, for mother's cooking, the corner drug store, the routine of office or factory. But it also must be remembered that their present experiences are changing them from boys into men, heightening their courage, their self-reliance, their aggressiveness. They will be different human beings when they return. Then is it reasonable to assume they will fit neatly into their old niches? It is not more likely that they will soon be looking around for change, "advance," greener pastures?

Neither is it certain that the "boys" will be wanting the old America socially and politically they are reputed to long for. Right now they are in no position to envision any America but the one they left. It is remembered in a rosy glow—its problems of poverty, unemployment, slums, disease forgotten. But after the veterans are home for a while, rested and adjusted, it is probable that they, no matter how conservative politically they may be, will find themselves impatient of a democracy that is too hidebound by tradition to solve its problems, too static to save itself.

Of course no one can say that the "boys" en masse will want this or that, or that as a unit they will take any definite political or economic stand. They will vary in viewpoint and attitude as much as other Americans. But because they are Americans, one generalization can safely be made. They will not go back to the same lives they were leading before Munich, or before Pearl Harbor—or even to the same ideas. War, economics, science, history will have made a new world for them. Being Americans, they will welcome its challenge and move on with it.

Future Of Italy

By Sumner Welles

Representative Government

In the President's address upon the liberation of Rome there are three sentences which are peculiarly enlightening. They set forth the basic objectives in the policy toward the Italian people upon which this government has determined. They indicate a course of action which in its long-range aspects is altogether realistic and wholly wise.

The three sentences are as follows:

"The Italian people are capable of self-government. We do not lose sight of their virtues as a peace-loving nation.

"We want and expect the help of the future Italy toward lasting peace."

Even at the most critical moment in these tremendous days the President thus made it plain that we cannot afford to lose sight of the political objectives for which we fight. For unless they are unremittingly pursued the chances of their ultimate achievement are correspondingly reduced.

The military importance of the Allied occupation of the Italian capital is great, but its political significance is even greater.

THE LIBERATION of the Eternal City brings to the Vatican the termination of the duress to which it has been subjected for many months. The Pope and the authorities of the Holy See are now once more in untrammeled communication with the free peoples of the United Nations. This and the fact that the holy places of Rome have been saved from the destruction which the German vandals have wrought upon religious monuments in so many other cities have brought a profound sense of relief to millions in every quarter of the globe.

The moral value of the freeing of the Vatican cannot be overestimated.

But the liberation of Rome, as the President's words make plain, marks also for the Italian people the first stage on their road back to representative government and, should they themselves so choose, toward their resumption of that honorable place within the family of nations of which they permitted fascism to deprive them.

There will be general agreement with the President that the Italian people, when they were free to govern themselves, have given evidence of possessing "virtues as a peace-loving nation." They have never shown any sign that they could become that menace to the rest of the world which the German people have been for so many generations. They have never willingly been a disruptive factor in Europe. The flamboyant efforts of Mussolini to inculcate in them the spirit of militarism, which is the dominating factor in both the German and Japanese mentality, ended in ludicrous failure. No one who, like myself, was in Italy in the weeks prior to the day when Mussolini forced Italy into the war at the side of Germany, and who saw how every element of the Italian population bitterly opposed this fatal step, could have failed to realize how unsuccessful fascism had been in its persistent effort to make of the Italian people a predatory and warlike race.

THE ITALIAN PEOPLE must now be afforded every chance to redeem themselves. They must demonstrate through their own initiative and by their own volition their undoubted ability to become helpful partners in that new world order which the United Nations are about to create.

But they cannot offer any such proof unless they are willing once and for all to abandon the illusion that the happiness of Italy is contingent upon the acquisition of a "place in the sun," and to show that they realize that the days of imperial exploitation are ended. They must learn that the prosperity of the Italian people has been increased by the emigration of Italy's surplus population to other countries where Italian emigrants have been welcomed and where they have proved good citizens, and that Italian attempts at colonization have invariably proved a detriment to the true interests of the masses of the people and to Italian economy. They must learn that their own political and economic stability and a rise in their standard of living will be contingent upon their capacity to become first of all good Europeans and, secondly, to make of their country a worthy members of a new and better international structure.

The immediate issue with which the United Nations are confronted is the question of what kind of an Italian regime should be permitted to exercise authority until the whole of Italy is liberated and the Italian people are able freely to decide upon their own national government. Not least among the ruinous features of fascism was the ruthless suppression over a period of more than 20 years of all independent leadership. It is for this reason that when the overthrow of the fascist dictatorship took place only a pitifully few leaders of Italian democracy were to be found. But this handful, fortunately, existed, and of these Italian patriots a few have already commenced to participate in the task of Italian restoration.

UNTIL THE northern provinces of Italy are liberated from the German invaders, and the great industrial cities of these areas are freed, no opportunity can be given the Italian people as a whole to make known their decisions with regard to the nature of their government. Political confusion is inevitable for some time to come. It will take time to eradicate the last vestiges of the fascist cancer, but the duration of this period of instability can be shortened if the Italian people in all the liberated provinces are given at the earliest possible moment the opportunity to elect their own municipal and provincial governments. Such elections would provide a very practical demonstration of the desire of the Italian people to stamp out what remains of fascism. They would stimulate the native forces of democracy. They would strengthen the atrophied muscles of Italian self-government. Such a procedure would expedite the rebirth of constitutional and democratic government within Italy. It would undoubtedly assist the armies of the United Nations now operating within Italy in expelling the German forces from Italian soil.

Present political conditions within liberated Italy, should they continue for any protracted period, will not encourage the development of Italian democracy. The longer remedial action is postponed the less likely it will be that Italy can within any brief period offer that help toward lasting peace which the President has so wisely stated we both need and expect.

Widening Roads

Some weeks ago The Post showed a devastated stripe at the edge of Wesley Heights where hundreds of beautiful trees, mainly in a public park, had been removed in the widening of New Mexico ave. Although I am not a property owner of Wesley Heights I pass by this area often enough to feel moved to point out the tragedy of what has happened here to a once charming bit of intimate countrylike scenery. This stretch of New Mexico ave. had been one of the District's few remaining informal wooded roads; it will soon be a four-lane highway. No part of the widening is needed for our presen traffic; half of it has no connection whatever with a through downtown route and has been left for weeks in a scarred condition, disfiguring the neighborhood.

The following appears to have happened: The District Highway Department, needled by complaints about buses obstructing traffic on New Mexico ave. north of Cathedral ave., decided to widen not only that part of the street but also the remainder to the south, where traffic is negligible and where the only downtown outlet is narrow residential streets. It sent to nearby property owners routine assessment notices giving no hint of the great extent of widening and of tree removal contemplated. The Highway Department thus seems primarily responsible for the needless loss to the community.

On the other hand the residents near the widened road share the responsibility. The property owners near New Mexico ave. might easily have ascertained the details of the proposed widening and might have protested against it. That the District authorities are not necessarily deaf to such protests is shown by the fact that Foxhall rd. some time ago was saved from a similar fate by energetic resistance of nearby residents. The District Government recognized that these residents had made a good case against the proposed widening of that outstandingly beautiful wooded road and its attitude was reasonable and cooperative.

Gas Ration Boards

If the needs and sacrifices of our fighting forces were not such a serious and tragic matter, the propaganda emanating out of Washington and appealing to the public to "smash the black market in gasoline" would be ironical. The gasoline black market may be traced to OPA as the result of maladministration since the inception of all rationing.

On several occasions the writer has called attention to the idiosyncratic decisions of OPA and ration boards. Created as an agency with all the prerogatives of a dictatorship, operating under "directives" above and beyond the law, and before which no application has recourse to constitutional law, they have run amuck with unlimited control over the essentials of life to every citizen.

Unfortunately, many thousands are and have been victims of OPA persecution; jobs, businesses and farms have been lost along with time and a great deal of money.

In March you published a letter of mine which suggested eliminating the volunteer system of ration boards, replacing them with a complete corps of salaried employes, composed of and supervised by recently discharged men from the fighting forces. Naturally, this suggestion was doomed to oblivion from the start, as the OPA intends to follow no recommendations that will change its status quo.

Political Trends

By Mark Sullivan

Precedents Broken

THIS IS ABOUT TWO events now much in the public mind. The two throw light on each other. And their happening about the same time throws light on an important principle which the two have in common. The common principle is, respect for precedent.

One event is the threat of Democrats in some Southern States to depart from a precedent of some 115 years, having to do with the States' electors in the electoral college. Ever since about the time of President Jackson, electors of the States in the electoral college have regarded their function as that of, so to speak, rubber stamps—the term is used with no intention of demeanment. Without exception (since about 1830) electors have cast the vote of a State for that presidential candidate who got a majority in the popular election.

Electors have been under no requirement of law to do this. The only obligation upon them is precedent—the obligation of respect for precedent.

THE CONSTITUTION does not say that electors shall act as rubber stamps. On the contrary, the Constitution strongly implies that the electors of a State shall use their discretion—shall cast the vote of a State for the presidential candidate who, in the judgment of the electors at the time they meet, seems best.

What is now suggested is that the electors should exercise their own judgment. By this, the electors would be in the same position as delegates from some States to national party conventions for nominating a presidential candidate. The voters of the State, in the primary, may have given a majority for one candidate or another. But this is regarded as merely advisory, not binding. The delegates can ignore it, and frequently do so, in the national conventions of both parties.

The suggestion that electors in the electoral college depart from a precedent of 115 years is deplored by many, including the present writer. The Democrats in Southern States who make the suggestion can find other and more direct ways to accomplish their objective, which is to prevent the electoral votes of their States from being cast for President Roosevelt.

TURN NOW to the other recent event. It is a decision of the Supreme Court, by which the Court reverses a precedent of 75 years' standing. The precedent was that regulation of the insurance business is a function of the States. The present reversal of the precedent has the effect or tendency of taking this function away from the States, transferring it to the Federal Government at Washington. As put by Chief Justice Stone, who dissents: "The immdeiate . . . effect of the decision now rendered is to withdraw from the States, in large measure, the regulation of insurance, and to confer it on the National Government." And as put by another justice, dissenting in part, Mr. Jackson: "The States began nearly a century ago to regulate insurance. . . . To use my office . . . with so little justification in necessity, to dislocate the functions . . . of the States . . . is more than I can reconcile with my view of the function of this court in our society . . . recklessness . . ."

NOW THE illuminating point is difference in the attitude of many New Dealers toward these two events, and their whole attitude as regards respect for precedent. Respect for precedent—and the opposite of that—compose the very heart of the deep struggle now going on in America.

Most New Dealers are pleased by the breach of precedent which would take insurance regulation away from the States and confer it on the Federal Government—because a basic tendency of the New Deal philosophy is to reduce the functions of the States and enlarge those of the Federal Government.

But against the other suggested breach of precedent, having to do with electors, the New Dealers cry out. It would be naive, however, to suppose they cry out because it is a breach of precedent. They cry out because the suggested breach tends toward preventing President Roosevelt from having a fourth term.

Another precedent, and its breach, belongs here. That a President should serve only two terms has a longer basis of precedent that the one having to do with electors. The precedent against a third term goes back to George Washington, who declined one.

It makes a difference whose precedent is gored.

Nation-wide Prayer

Reference is made to the lead editorial in today's Post wherein was stated the belief that President Roosevelt is the first President to have led the Nation in prayer. At the close of his address in the Arlington Amphitheater, dedicating the Tomb to the Unknown Soldier on Armistice Day in 1922, President Harding led the great audience, and radio listeners throughout the Nation, in recital of the Lord's Prayer.

Truckers Back On Job Pending WLB Decision

Richmond, Va., June 13 (AP).—Hundreds of trucks tied up since Sundayq at 15 Richmond trucking companies, when drivers and helpers refused to return to their jobs as result of a wage dispute, started rolling out of Richmond before noon today, folowing a meeting at headquarters of Truck Drivers and Helpers Union, Local 592.

L. G. Lane, union secretary and treasurer, said the drivers decided to return to work with the provision that if the War Labor Board did not take action on the dispute by June 30 a strike would be called on that day.

The walkout by an estimated 700 drivers, helpers and warehousemen held up shipment of more than 350,000 pounds of freight, mostly war materials. The walkout was unauthorized and union leaders had attempted to get the men to return and wait for the June 30 strike vote which was announced to the companies earlier.

W. P. Bishop, president of the Richmond Labor Relations Council, representing the companies involved, said a week would be required to get back to normal schedules. "We are behind with our shipments by about five million pounds of freight, including the shipments already in the trucks, and materhl piling up waiting to be loaded as soon as the trucks empty."

He added that the companies are dispatching the trucks as quickly as the drivers show up and are contacting the receivers to make arrangements at the various distribution centers for receiving the delayed freight.

Core Drilling Urged to Restore Waning Maryland Coal Output

Baltimore, June 13 (AP).—Western Maryland may find itself with "ghost towns" similar to those of the West unless rehabilitation of the State's coal mining industry is given high priority in postwar plans, Dr. Joseph J. Singewald declared today.

Dr. Singewald, director of the State Department of Geology, Mines and Water Resources, commented that numerous communities, particularly in the Georges Creek Basin in Allegany County, are dependent for their existence on the waning output from large coal veins.

If production cannot be increased, he continued, the scale of living will decline, unemployment follow and eventually the population will migrate to more prosperous locations.

He mentioned such communities as Frostburg, Westernport, Mount Savage and Lonanconing, with populations ranging from 2400 to 7500.

The Cumberland Chamber of Commerce has requested a program of core drilling to learn more about underlying seams of coal in the region.

Dr. Singerwald said that he has submitted a postwar project of core drilling which would provide for the sinking of 16 holes in the Georges Creek Basin at a cost of $50,000. In addition, he has recommended drilling in the upper Potomac Basin at a cost of $13,000. and in Garrett County at a cost of $27,000.

Coal production in Maryland represented 64 per cent of the State's mineral production in 1940, Dr. Singewald said, and in 1942 the Georges Cheek Basin produced 58 per cent of the coal mined in the State.

Soldier Seeks New Trial in Stepson Death

Baltimore, June 13, (AP). — A 24-year-old army paratrooper convicted in criminal court of manslaughter in the death of his 2-year-old stepson last May 13 waited today for a decision on his motion for a new trial.

Judge John T. Tucker deferred sentence pending disposition of the move.

Henry R. Tena denied mistreating little Larry J. McMickle either on the day in question or at any other time, saying the child became ill after the mother left late in the afternoon to do some marketing. The boy fell off the bed once while Tena was attempting to aid it, the soldier testified.

In response to questions about why he left the house and registered under a fictitious name in a nearby hotel instead of seeking a physician, Tena said he was afraid he would be apprehended by military police because he was A.W.O.L.

Testimony introduced by prosecutors showed a medical examination disclosed the child had a liver rupture, head injuries and 14 body contusions inflicted by a blunt instrument.

Tena married Mrs. Jewell Tena last December.

Maryland Crop Outlook Best In 10 Years

College Park, Md., June 13 (AP).—The over-all growing conditions in Maryland have been unusually favorable in spite of a late and uneven start, and prospects now appear better than in any of the last 10 years, except 1942, the Maryland Crop Reporting Service disclosed today.

A winter wheat crop of 7,934,000 bushels was indicated by June conditions. This would be a 61 per cent increase over 1943 and the largest crop since 1938. June 1 indicated rye production was 290,000 bushels, or 6 per cent larger than last year's crop, the service reported.

The indicated peach crop was estimated at 602,000 bushels, or nearly three times last year's crop, and pear production was estimated at 52,000 bushels, or about 2½ times 1943's production.

Maryland's farm chicken flocks produced 51 million eggs during May, 1944, as compared with 47 million produced in May, 1943, and milk production per cow in Maryland herds averaged 18.6 pounds per cow on June 1, compared with 18 pounds in 1943, the service said.

Apple Harvest Labor Sought In Augusta

Staunton, Va., June 13 (AP).—Men in charge of Augusta County apple orchards have apprehensions of losing a large portion of their crops unless more harvest labor can be secured and are issuing an urgent appeal to young men and women of the area to aid with the work.

Prices paid labor will be attractive, one orchardist said, and it will be possible for a good worker to earn from $5 to $15 a day. Women are particularly needed in packing rooms. Transportation for workers will be provided where needed.

University and college women throughout the State are being appealed to, and many are joining organized groups and are engaged in helping to harvest fruit and vegetable crops.

Although application has been made to have a war prison camp established in the county, it is said that prospects are not promising and the number which may possibly be assigned is very inadequate, constituting only a small per cent of what is needed.

Walker said he never carried a parachute because most of his 42 strike missions were strafing raids, with his bomber never more than 50 feet off the ground. "It wouldn't do any good to bail out at that height," he said.

Judge Refuses Citizenship to Nazi Fugitives

Baltimore, June 13 (AP).—Federal Judge William C. Coleman, who has consistently declined to grant final citizenship papers to 'enemy' aliens who left Germany after Hitler came to power, stood firm today despite criticism that he was "arbitrary" and in conflict with other courts.

Baltimore City Solicitor Simon Sobeloff, who represented a number of enemy aliens seeking naturalization, criticized Judge Coleman during the case of Rabbi Simon Schwab of Baltimore, who left Germany in 1936. Final action was postponed on the rabbi's application.

Judge Coleman said his policy did not imply any 'unworthiness among those before him, but said too many 'enemy' aliens had been admitted to citizenship and that some of them had been proven guilty of subversive activity.

The naturalization laws, he continued, do not require granting of citizenship but say it may be granted, Judge Coleman remarked that in these times it was impossible to make such investigations of applicants as he considered desirable.

Sobeloff replied that Earl G. Harrison, U. S. commissioner of immigration, was in court and ready to testify in favor of today's applicants. Sobeloff also asserted that 2000 other judges in the United States had taken a view in direct conflict with that of Judge Coleman while only one other agreed with him.

The court remarked that "while it may be a hardship on these people and while it may be that every one of them is entitled to citizenship, if this rule prevents any person who is not entitled to citizenship from becoming a citizen, then the policy is justified."

Martin Aircraft Union Asks WLB For Pay Increases

By the Associated Press

The CIO United Auto Workers submitted oral and written arguments to the War Labor Board air frame panel yesterday in support of its demands for increases in wages for the 10 labor grades at the Glenn L. Martin Co., Baltimore.

The minimum of the lowest grade is 60 cents an hour and the maximum for the highest grade is $1.50. The union asked this range be revised upward and narrowed to 80 cents and $1.60.

E. J. Moran, assistant regional director of the UAW, argued that these revisions were justified because of the rates paid at the Eastern aircraft division of General Motors in Baltimore, and because of shipbuilding rates for comparable jobs.

Voting Light In Virginia City Elections

By the Associated Press

Voters in many of Virginia's cities and towns cast their ballots yesterday for mayor and councilman. The voting in most instances was light because of a minimum of opposition and the act of voting a mere formality.

At Richmond the electorate will ratify their choice in the April primary election of a mayor, second assistant Commonwealth's attorney and 26 councilmen, all of whom were nominated without opposition.

William C. Herbert, former director of the department of public safety, is the only candidate for Mayor of Richmond whose name will appear on the ballot, but C. W. Kelley, Richmond plumber, has announced he will be a write-in candidate.

At Norfolk, voters chose three councilmen from a list of six. The two winning candidates receiving the largest number of votes will serve 4 years by reason of the fact that one of the present councilmen at Norfolk is serving out the unexpired term of Leonard P. Roberts, who died in office about 20 months ago. For the first time in the city's history a write-in candidate, Ed. W. Davis, independent, was seeking election by supplying voters with rubber stamps bearing his name at the polls. He filed too late for his name to be included on the ballot.

Virginia Beach will elect three town councilmen, with six candidates contesting for the seats, and a town treasurer, a position for which the incumbent, Richard A. Jones, is unopposed.

Interest is centered on the councilmanic election in Danville where 4 candidates are running for mayor and 12 for the 4 seats on council, and a vote of about 4000 is expected to be polled.

Five candidates are running for the three vacancies on the Staunton city council, three of them being incumbents. They are Mayor William A. Grubert, Jesse M. Bratton and George B. Tullidge, while the two other candidates are Forest T. Taylor, a lawyer, and A. G. Stogdale, a banker.

W. Va., Youth, 20, Loses Farm Deferment Plea

Martinsurg, W. Va., June 13 (Spl.).—The Presidential Draft Review Board has placed Floyd Page Spiker, 20, in a 1-A classification on an appeal of his case by the State director of Selective Service in West Virginia, it was disclosed today by draft board offices here.

Deferment had been asked by his employer, James E. MacDonald, of Arden, farmer and extensive fruit grower, on the ground the man was essential. The local board declined to defer the registrant, and McDonald appealed to the State district appeal board, which upheld McDonald. The local board then called the case to the attention of the State director who sent it to the Presidential Board.

Johnson and Daughtry, who escaped from a prison camp near Chatham, were given 24 years each on the robbery charge and 10 years each on the kidnaping charge, the sentences to run concurrently. Tyree had reported he was taken from his farm in Franklin County to a point near Greensboro where he was put out of the car, tied to a tree and robbed of $125.

The heart-stopping story

DAYBREAK FOR OUR CARRIER
By Lieutenant Max Miller, U.S.N.R.
Author of I COVER THE WATERFRONT

Introduction by Rear Admiral Arthur C. Davis, U.S.N.
"This book tells how a carrier lives in terms of the human beings who live on it... the men who are launching thousand-plane attacks on the Japanese islands and winning our slow, hard victory in the Pacific. It is a good book and a human book."—Rear Admiral A. W. Radford, U.S.N., Assistant Deputy Chief Naval Operations (Air).
"The men are here to the life with their speech, and their silences, their behavior and their beliefs... The effect is to make both the action and the life of the men, the husbands, brothers, sons of countless readers, seem unusually real and vivid."—Raymond Holden, Book-of-the-Month Club News.

I remember from school.

I once had to do a composition about the world's greatest invention being wheels. Just think of gear-wheels, water-wheels, and especially all the wheels for transportation! But right now the greatest thing of all, I'd say, is to keep wheels going; keeping your car in service, for instance. There's this and that to help you. There's one motor oil and another. Now from what I know, the explosions in any engine must produce acids, which brings up the bright idea of safely OIL-PLATING your engine's insides with Conoco Nth motor oil. You want to prevent damage from acids... internal corrosion! Some things are specially good at fighting corrosion; and OIL-PLATING comes in that class. Even chromium plating, just for comparison, couldn't stay closer to working parts than this protective OIL-PLATING. It battles corrosion, so as to help you preserve your transportation as soon as you switch to Conoco Nth oil.

BARNABY By Crockett Johnson

Barnaby!
Look, Jane! Mr. O'Malley! He's back...
Jane!—Your aunt!—She's DISAPPEARED!
VANISHED! Cottage locked up as if she'd left of her own will! Every sign of the violent struggle cleverly obliterated! All the bloodstains removed! ...I dug up a flower bed and part of the cellar floor, but—
What's he talking about?
So, Barnaby, I was saying, we got this letter from my aunt. She went to Boston.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

That fuss between Bud Metheny and George Myatt at Griffith Stadium the other night was long overdue. There hadn't been a fight between the Nats and the Yankees since 1936. They used to be famous for it. For a long time they were the two clubs with the shortest tempers in the league.

POVICH

The Yankees have a slight edge in the battling, incidentally. Ben Chapman and Bill Dickey scored two clean decisions during the feud. More of those, later, the first flare-up this department recalls involved Bucky Harris and the late Lou Gehrig back in 1925 when the Nats fighting for the pennant they finally won.

No fists were thrown in that incident, but it was exciting nevertheless. They were playing in Yankee Stadium and the Nats had the tying run on second base with two out in the ninth. Bucky Harris was at bat, and grounded to Third Baseman Joe Dugan. The throw to Gehrig at first base beat Harris by a full step and Harris was out—until he stepped on Gehrig's foot with his spikes.

Gehrig's shoe was all but torn off and in deep pain he dropped the ball. The tying run scored from second and the Yanks were hopping mad. They claimed Harris spiked Gehrig deliberately. Bucky would never admit that. In later years, all he would say was "What do you think?"

Later in the same series, big Fred Marbury walked over to the Yankee dugout and challenged any or all of the Yanks to put up their fists. Strangely his offer went unaccepted. Babe Ruth laughed him down, and the others, apparently, didn't want to make a bad match.

The best punch of the long feuding was landed by Bill Dickey on Carl Reynolds' chin in 1932. That was at Griffith Stadium. The 200-pound Reynolds had just slid into the plate, knocking Dickey head over heels and making him drop the ball. Dickey picked himself up as Reynolds headed for the dugout and banged Reynolds on the jaw when the latter had his back turned.

There was no other punch landed. Reynolds went down, his jaw broken. His victim, Reynolds, was out for half the season. His jaw was tightly wired, and he could take only liquid food. One night on his way to a movie in a taxi with Mrs. Reynolds, he was overcome with nausea. He gagged and was near strangulation when with admirable presence of mind, Mrs. Reynolds averted tragedy by clipping the wires that held his jaw with a pair of manicuring scissors from his purse.

In 1933, also at Griffith Stadium, the best fight of the feud took place. That one was between Ben Chapman and Buddy Myer. Chapman came into second base and knocked Myer down. He got up and started swinging. It was a whale of a scrap before they were separated and both banished, as was Dixie Walker, who was helping Chapman.

There was another episode to that afternoon, however. Chapman, as he left the field via the Washington dugout, heard Earl Whitehill make a dirty crack. With no further preliminaries, Chapman wheeled and hung one on Whitehill's left eye. For speaking out of turn, Whitehill got himself a beaut. He drew a shiner, and Chapman and Myer drew fines.

Later that season, there was a riot that brought both fans and players on the field. Gehrig hit a ball over the right field fence that was foul by a dozen feet. Umpire Brick Owens called it fair. Whitehill, justifiably, blew up. He raised a fist toward Owens and was put out of the game. Before he left, he set a record for throwing an umpire's whiskbroom, heaving it over the roof of the grandstand on the fly.

Myer was the ringleader in the feuding with the Yanks that season. He was burned up by Chapman's crack that "he never did know how to protect himself at second base and ought to start learning how to play the position." On a play at first, in which Myer was out by 10 feet, he tried to cut Gehrig down with a slide into the big first baseman's lap. For his trouble, Myer landed on his head 15 feet away from the immovable Gehrig.

The battling broke out again in Yankee Stadium in 1936. That was when Jake Powell had joined the Yankees. Joe Kuhel was playing first base for the Nats, Powell, who had broken Hank Greenberg's arm on a similar play, brushed Kuhel roughly on an infield out at first base. They battled furiously until Walter Millies, reserve catcher of the Nats, broke it up by rushing from the dugout and leaping on Powell's back. Smart catcher, that Millies. He had the foresight to put on his mask before plunging into the fight.

Golf's Grand Old Man

Chick Evans, After 33 Years On Links, Still Going Strong

By Charles Chamberlain

Chicago, June 13 (AP).—Sunburned Chick Evans, still boyish-looking at the age of 53, had played 5000 rounds at the Edgewater Golf Club in preparation for the Chicago Victory National Championship there June 28-July 2.

"I guess you could call 'em practice rounds," winked the original boy wonder of golf. "I'm the oldest Edgewater member and in the last 33 years I've played some 90,000 holes on the course—just waiting, you might say, for a big tournament like the Victory National to come to Edgewater."

Evans holds the course record of 64—6 under par—and is such a familiar figure on the links the trap don't bother to yawn when he passes.

"But I'm not kidding myself about winning the title," he grinned. "Craig Wood, Jug McSpaden, Sammy Byrd and Byron Nelson—those are just some of the fellows this old man will be up against. A 72-hole score of 272 should win. My ambition is just to shoot a 70, which would be the lowest single round score made in a major tournament by a 50-year-old."

Broken Leg Starts Him

Evans—the terror of the links from 1909-1925 during a career climaxed by winning both the National Open and Amateur in 1916—got his start by breaking his leg.

"I came up from the caddy ranks at the old Edgewater course which now is an apartment house district," he recalled. "One day I broke my leg playing football. I just stayed around the golf course and sort of convalesced while the other kids were in school. By the time summer came in 1903 I was the best golfer in the caddy ranks. Yep, that broken leg gave me my chance."

In 1907 Evans won the Chicago City Title and two years later he captured the first of his eight Western Amateur crowns.

"Haven't won a major tournament in about 20 years," he said, "but I've been knocking at the door many times."

The door may squeak open for the "grand old man of golf" this time.

Dodger Guns Boom as Giants Fall, 9 to 4

New York, June 13 (AP).—It was Brooklyn's turn today to unleash its heavy artillery and the Dodgers defeated the New York Giants, 9 to 4, with a trio of home runs accounting for six of the winner's runs.

Stan Bordagaray opened the scoring in the third with a four-master that found a mate on base; Dixie Walker punched one in the fifth with two runners on and Howard Schultz connected in the ninth with the sacks empty.

It wasn't until the seventh that the Giants were able to score off Ed Head, who was registering his second win of the year. The losers got two more counters in the eighth when Joe Medwick lifted one into the stands after Hugh Luby had singled.

Pirates Edge Reds, 3-2, as Rain Halts Play

Cincinnati, June 13 (AP).—Three doubles in the fourth inning helped account for three runs to day as the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated Cincinnati, 3 to 2, in a game stopped by rain and hall after five innings.

The doubles were contributed by Johnny Barrett, Frank Coleman and Al Lopez before a ladies' day crowd of 2469. These plus an outfield fly and a walk to Frankie Gustine gav ethe Pirates all their runs to edge out first frame Red scoring manufactured on two singles, a fielder's score and miscues by Lee Handley and Barrett.

Ray Starr, waived from the Reds two weeks ago, yielded one other hit, a fourth-inning triple to Ray Mueller, in winning against his old teammates, while Ed Heusser parceled out a total of five.

Mickey Walker, Now an Artist, Exhibits Painting

Chicago, June 13 (AP).—Artist Edward P. Walker, the same Mickey Walker who once wielded a wicked touch on the boxing canvas, has exhibited his first important painting since he retired from the ring a few years to make passes at an easel.

Walker's "Christmas Masquerade" — depicting a youngster dresed as Santa Claue visiting a rural home—is among a collection submitted by 22 ranking artists currently on display by the Chicago Ne-Jury Society of Artists which is sponsoring the event.

The offering of the former welter and middleweight champion, described by exhibit officials as "an inspiration to children," bears a $1500 price tag, tops in the collection.

Walker, who trimmed such battlers as Johnny Risko, Ace Hudkins, Tiger Flowers, Mike McTigue, Paup Berlenback and Jack Britton during a 16-year campaign which ended in 1935, isn't here for his artistic debut. Along with Jockey Earl Sande and other members of an USO outfit is preparing to entertain overseas soon.

Browns Win On Collision In 9th, 5-3

Chicago, June 13 (AP).—The league-leading St. Louis Browns turned a Chicago White Sox fielding collision into a ninth-inning rally that netted three runs and a 5-to-3 victory today.

Wally Moses, veteran Chicago right fielder, crashed into Second Baseman Roy Schalk just as Schalk was catching pinch-hitter Ellis Clary's pop-fly at the start of the ninth frame, the Brownies added singles by Mike Kreevich, George McQuinn and Mark Christman, to give Pitcher Jack Kramer his eighth victory.

Clary, who pulled up at second as his pop fly squirted off Schalk's glove into right field, was trapped on Don Gutteridge's bunt. Gutteridge scored the tying run as hits by Kreevich and McQuinn drove Ed Lopat, Chicago's starting southpaw, to the showers. Gordon Maltzberger, ace relief hurler, got Vern Stephens on a foul and walked pinch-hitter Gene Moore to fill the bases. Then Christmas singled in the marginal runs.

Chisox Grab Early Lead

George Caster shut out the Chicagoans in the ninth, though Hal Trosky got a pinch double in his first appearance since injuring his side May 26.

Chicago jumped into an early 2-1 lead when singles by Moses and Thurman Tucker provided a first inning run, and a pass and singles by Mike Tresh and Lopat added another in the second. The Browns tallied on sigles by Milt Byrnes and Myron Hayworth, sanwdiched around a wild pitch, in their second.

Doubles by Schalk and Rlaph Hodgin put the Sox back in the lead, 3-2, in the eigth after Kreevich had created a temporary tie with his season's fourth home in the seventh.

Manager Jim Dykes of the White Sox watched most of the game from the left field boxes after being banished by Umpire Cal Hubbard between halves of the second inning for his remarks from the bench. It was the first banishment this season for the Sox pilot, whose runs-in with the arbiters were regular occurrences several years ago.

Bordagaray Attains Stardom As Member of Dizzy Dodgers

By Oscar Fraley

New York, June 13 (U.P.).—Leave us face it tonight for Frenchy Bordagaray, baseball's bounding Basque who was born to be a "Dizzy Dodger," finally has attained prominence in the wacky Flatbush flock after 14 years of long endeavor.

Frenchy went at it wrong. He was just dizzy. But now he has turned to baseball and it's paying greater dividends than any of his screw-ball antics.

Stanley George, as he was christened, could have been a natural long ago by combining his pleasure with his business. For now, attending strictly to his baseball business, he is leading the Majors in run scoring and it's getting so that every time you look up Frenchy is perched on the bog. He averaged two times on base for each game the Dodgers have layed.

War Gave Him Chance

The manpower situation got Frenchy his break, a crack at third, after years of mediocrity afiel dfor the White Sox, Cardinals, Reds, Yanks and Brooklyn. And at 32, the swarthy little guy with the bulging bow legs is knocking them dead.

It's quite a reversal in Frenchy's fortunes and actually fulfills his destiny, that of becoming a top Dodger he had all the other qualifications as he has proved in the 32 years since his proud father gazed on him for the first time and decided that little Frenchy should be a concert violinist. French settled for the washboard trumping role in Pepper Martin's Musical Mudcats, the Cardinal Gas House Gang's misnamed "orchestra."

It didn't take Frenchy long to disillusion his daddy. Leaving Fresno State College after two years, in which he was a four-letter man, Bordagary signed with Sacramento. It didn't take him long to pove that h ewas a Dodger at heart.

Cocky and Aggressive

Cocky and aggressive despite his miniature size of 5 feet 7 inches, the confident Frenchy immediately challenged anybody in the Coast League to a foot race. eJss Hitt, an Olympic dash man who had been up with the Yanke, accepted the offer and Frenchy made good his promise. But htat didn't satisfy Bordy, so at the 1932 State fair he offered to race a horse. They put him up against a pacer, Star Etawah, in a 100-yard dash, and when the horse won by a slightly larger nose, Frenchy charged that the hrose was needled and demanded it be given a saliva test.

Typical of Frenchy y 1934 was his mustache and goatee, only such hirsute adornments in organized all. And equally Dodger-lie was his losing a game while sitting on the bench. It seems Frenchy forgot to take right field in the ninth and no one noticed it until the opposition hit a line drive there to win the game, 8 to 7. And then there was his arrival with the Dodgers and an invitation from the French Club of New York to dinner—for which the happy-go-lucky Frenchy had to get an interpreter. It seems that learning French at home was too much trouble.

Frenchy still is cocky and aggressive, but he confines it to the ball park these days and it's paying dividends. Mystified, President Branch Rickey describes him as "either the poorest great third baseman or the greatest poor third baseman." Manager Leo' Durocher says simply, "I'd like to have eight more men just like him."

Braves Edge Phillies, 2-1 Then Bow, 8-7

Philadelphia, June 13 (INS).—The Philadelphia Phillies terminated a five-game losing streak today by splitting a doubleheader with the Boston Braves. The Phillies won the nightcap 8 to 7 after dropping the opener 2 to 1 to Jim Tobin.

The Phillies landed on Nate Andrews and Ben Cardoni for 13 hits in the second game. The Phils' onslaught was featured by Luke Lupien's two singles and brace of triples as well as Ron Northey's hom erun with the bases empty.

Boston clinched the first game for Tobin by scoring two runs in the third inning. Tommy Holmes got six hits in nine trips to the plate today.

New Orleans, June 13 (AP).—Richard A. Callahan, father of 19-year-old Dick Callahan, high school pitcher, who yesterday signed a baseball contract with the Boston Red Sox, disclosed today that his son was given a bonus of $15,000 for joining the Red Sox organization.

Young Callahan and the Boston farm system manager, George Torporcer, who completed the deal yesterday, refused to say how much cash was involved at the time of the signing. Torporcer said that it was "the largest bonus ever paid a high school player."

Macricostas Faces Angel at Turner's

The French Angel, the huge-headed grappling freak, headlines the Turner Arena card tonight in a finish match with George Macricostas, the winner of which is to receive a championship shot at Babe Sharkey here within a few weeks.

The match tops a card of four matches, including a team match in which Herman (Dutch) Rhode and Maurice La Chappelle will attempt to beat the new winning duo, Angeloo Savoldi and John Vansky of Boston.

Don Evans meets Billy Darnell and Long faces Bill Middlekauff in the other matches.

Mitchell's Entry Pays $20.40

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Charles Town, W. Va., June 13—Mrs. E. R. Mitchell's Blicky Boy, an invader from Wheeling Downs, made his first start of the year here in a winning one, taking the Roane Purse in a driving finish. Pearson and Shank's Makann, the odds-on favorite in the field of five, finished second beaten by a half length. Third money went to John Fausett's John's Teddy. The field operated at about four and a half furlongs an dthe winner was clocked in 49 3-5, only the fraction over the track record set four years ago by Irene's Bob. Blicky Boy carried top weight of 119 pounds and was capably handled by Jockey Patsy Grant.

An estimated crowd of 3000 saw the day's action and the fortunate few who backed the chances of Blickey Boy collected at the rate of $20.40 to $2

Makann Early Leader

Makann, recently acquired by Pearson and Shank through the claiming box, went to the front at once. Blicky Boy, however, was close up. At the far turn, the two hooked up in a head and head battle that lasted until the final 20 yards where Blicky Boy drew out gradually. John's Teddy closed boldly to be third. The race ended a winning streak of Oomph, who broke slowly and trailed throughout.

Pearson and Shank fared better in the fourth race, another event. Their Discretion won by a neck in this sprint of about four and a half furlongs. Discretion, well handled by Jockey Frank Shaeffer, won by a neck over the Palmetto Stable's Post War Style with G. G. Waugh's Milk Chocolate third. Discretion paid $5.40.

The daily double on E. A. Nicodemus' Granny Cake and V. S. McClintock's Queen Minatoka paid $37.

BETWEEN RACES . . . Eddie Smith, veteran Washington jockey who recently took out a trainers license, may return to the saddle. Horsemen have been faced by a shortage of veteran riders and have been urging Smith to make a comeback. He weighed 112 pounds today and is fit as the result of working horses in the morning. Jockey Sammy Palumbo is recovering from an illness that has kept him on the sidelines for several days. Sam (Tiger) Finkelstein, former telegraph operator at all Maryland tracks, has entered the Mount Pleasant Hospital in Baltimore for a check up and wants his friends to write to him. Apprentice Bobby Edens, leading "bug" boy at the meeting, turned in a masterful job of rating aboard E. B. Lee's Fondenella in the seventh race today. He brought the mare around the field and then got her up in the final jump to take a photo from Bill's Anne. Upjack was claimed out of the fifth race for $800 by S. M. Follin and C. P. Sowers took Yank Pilot for $1000 out of second race.

Six Gamblers Held For Making Bets In Shibe Park

Philadelphia, June 13 (AP).—Acting upon baseball fans' complaints, vice squad detectives went into the left-field stands at Shibe Park today and arrested six men on gambling charges during the doubleheader between the Boston Braves and the Phillies.

The detectives said slips showed one of the men had made a single bet of $1200 at 6 to 5 that the Braves would win the first game. They added that the slips showed he made 60 other bets in the first 8½ innings for a total of $6619, and that all he had on him in cash was $700.

From five of the men, accusted of bookmaking, the detectives took a total of $4210. The sixth man, they said, served as a "lookout," who was supposed to tip the others off to the presence of police. All were slated for hearings tomorrow.

Navy Athletic Instructors See Top Middie Teams in '45

Annapolis, June 13 (AP).—Naval Academy athletic coaches predicted today that prospects for the 1945 program of Navy's four major spring sports—baseball, tennis, track and lacrosse—are bright despite the annual toll of academy athletic stars by graduation.

The track squad, composed largely of plebes, will be in the best shape when the season opens next April.

The loss of George Brown in the shot put and discus throw will be serious since he not only captained the squad to an undefeated season but took top honors in the discus at the IC 4-A championships several weeks ago.

Boswell Graduated

Hal Boswell, specialist in the 100-yard dash, graduated June 7 as did Julien Lebourgeois, 440-yard speedster. These men will be hard to replace but Jack Caskey in the 440 and Jim Pettit in the 100-dash should fill the vacancies well.

Other track stars who have left include Al Geiger, 220-yard low hurdles, Dick Kessler, also a hurdler, Floyd Sessions, Pole Vault Champion Kenny Longnecker, high jumper, and Bill Strong in the discus throw.

Ben Chase, captain of next season's football squad, will handle the shot put department next spring while Hal Hamberg, captain-elect of the track squad for 1945, will take the spotlight in javelin.

Van Velzer, a plebe on this season's varsity, will give Pettit support in the 100-yard dash and Walt Barry will again return to the turf to star in the mile runs.

Baseball will face similar gaps with the graduation of shortstop and Team Captain Lanny Zech. Pitcher Paul Burdette and First Baseman Bud Bowler but the remainder of the team will be composed of veterans and the necessary replacements will be made by Coach Max Bishop from Plebe and Junior Varsity ranks.

Coulter to be Back

Jack Coulter, will in all likelihood, handle the catching chore behind the plate with Dale Mueller leading an imposing group of promising mound operators.

(Rabbit) Curry, a Plebe who made good at the end of the recent schedule at third base with timely hitting and flawless fielding, will be on hand again at the hot corner.

Wirt Thayer and Dick Duden will return to the outfield again and an able group of contestants for shortstop and second base should not give Bishop much worry.

The tennis team, headed by Brownie Edwards, will try for the third straight national collegiate crown as represented by the Larned Cup. or two years now, the racquet artists Fhave gone undefeated ned present indications of available material point to another successful season.

Lacrosse Prospects Bright

St. Paul's School of Baltimore City as well as other Baltimore high schools may supply Coach Dinty Moore with enough plebe material to improve a better than average lacrosse club at the academy next spring

The Baltimore High School wielders are the main source of academy lacrosse teams and many of them are probable entrants in the incoming class of midshipmen this summer.

Barring a 7-5 loss to Army to close their season, the Middie lacrosse team had a successful season and were only kept from winning the Wingate Trophy, symbol of national leadrship in thsi sport, by that defeat to their service rival.

Next year's club is still a questio nmark, in view of the loss by graduation of stars like Bill Bonwit, Charlie Guy, Vince Anania, Hillis Hume and Charlie Grove. However, Moore is counting on some likely stars in 1944's plebe and junior carsity teams as well as upon the new plebe class.

Stanley Hack Returns to Cubs

Chicago, June 13 (AP).—Chicago baseball fans greeted one of their favorite players today, Stanley Mack, the Chicago Cubs' veteran third baseman.

The 34-year-old Mack came from his Oregon ranch and will make his first 1944 appearance with the Cubs when they return to Wrigly Field from a road trip.

Mack, who has played with the Cubs for 12 years, earlier had announced he would be unable to play this year because of duties on his ranch.

Ga. Plans 'B' Eleven

Athens, Ga., June 13 (AP).—So that every student who wants a chance to play may have one, the University of Georgia will have a "B" footbal team next fall, Coach Wally Butte anounced today.

Hurler Undefeated

Mike Wardrop, Penn State pitching ace, was undefeated this season. He also was unbeaten in the 1942 campaign.

Pvt. Dick Melvin Enters Maryland Amateur Golf Meet

Baltimore, June 13 (AP).—Three of Washington's topflight golfers are expected to be among those competing in the 24th annual State amateur golf championship to be held Friday at the Baltimore Country Club.

Listed as one of the probable G. Burnett, title-winner in 1937 and starters from the Capital is Volney 1941, and representing the Indian Springs Club.

Eddie Ault, also of Indian Springs, and Pvt. Dick Melvin of the Kenwood Country Club are other entries from Washington, it is reported.

For the first time in the history of the title event, the tournament will be a medal contest. The players will compete over a 36-hole route and the contestant holding the lowest score for the distance will be recognized as the 1944 champion.

The present titleholder, Bob Albertus, now is a non-resident of the State.

Introducing Sonny Fraser, Who Makes Golf Ball Do Tricks

By Whitney Martin

New York, June 13 (AP).—"Hit it it with your practice swing," Sonny Fraser kept saying, and we obediently would step up to the ball, immediately get tighter than New Year's Eve, and with a tremendous slugging effort send the ball jackrabbiting down the fairway a good 50 yards.

Which is neither here nor there, except that it shows what kind of a guy this James E. (Sonny) Fraser is. Here was the best amateur golfer we ever saw (we never saw Bobby Jones) and the longest hitter, professional or amateur, playing the Atlantic City

Iron Shot, $3.90, Scores At Aqueduct

Aqueduct Racetrack, N. Y., June 13 (AP).—Running one of the finest and gamest races of his career, Iron Shot, owned by Miss Ella Widener, drove to a nose triumph over Mrs. F. A. Clark's Invader in the third Hitchcock Steeplechase Handicap before 21,123 fans here today.

Carrying 163 pounds and spotting Invader 21, the 7-year-old red brown gelding stumbled so badly at the seventeenth hedge that he nearly went down, but managed to gain the photo award and a purse of $4840.

Caddie, from the Rokeby Stables, lost the pace by three lengths. Bavarian and Bridlespur brought up the rear.

Iron Shot covered the distance of about two miles and a half in 4:56 4-5. Corrigan set the track mark of 4:35 in the 1943 runing of the stake, but under a mere 142 pounds.

Iron Shot, paying $3.90, narrowly escaped the jinx which has been following odds-on choices at the meeting.

When Dustman was defeated in today's fuorth contest, it marked the tenth setback for odds-on horses out of an even dozen tries during the current session.

Iron Shot, winner of two stakes and second twice in four attempts at the recent Belmont meeting, was nicely rated by Ned Brown while Bridlespur and Invader showed the way. Bridlespur had half-mile, Invader and the favor-enough when they began the final ite then forging to the front. They came to the last obstacle virtually even. Despite his bad bobble, Iron Shnt was righted by Brown in time to take it a nerve-tingling and successful drive to the wire.

Mrs. Dreyfus One of Few Honored by Foreign Nation; A Christening Is Averted

DIPLOMATIC DATA: One of the few U. S. envoys' wives to be decorated by a foreign government is Mrs. Louis Dreyfus, now en route with her husband to his new post as first U. S. Minister to the new Republic of Iceland. . . . Shortly before she left Iran, where her husand served as Minister for four years, she was decorated with the coveted Order of Elmi (Iranian order of merit, first class) for her work in alleviating the sufferings of more than 15,000 ill-clad and undernourished natives of Teheran. . . . She devoted more than three years to the clinic which she established in the heart of the city—a clinic dispensing food, clothing and medical supplies furnished by the American Red Cross.

Her most difficult task was helping provide clothing for the needy during the terrible winter of 1942-43. . . . she appealed to the Red Cross Civilian Relief Service; begged for material that could be made into coats, suits and dresses; pointed out that otherwise thousands of men and women would die. The answer: All available clothing from the United States had been issued to Polish refugees in camps throughout Iran; only material on hand was a large shipment of baby diapers.

"Send them to me," she urged. She got them, and speedily brought together a group of natives skilled in sewing. They pieced together the diapers; made dresses, shirts and trousers. Within a couple of weeks, several thousand Iranians who would have gone without clothing were clad. Yes, in white; but far better than nothing.

Shortly before she and her husband left Teheran in April, she received the decoration from the Government of Iran. The citation read, "To the gold-haired mother who has done much good." That's recognition of Diplomacy. . . with a capital "D."

THE KALBFUS CASE: Here's a personal nomination for one of the most delightful couples in Washington—Admiral and Mrs. Edward C. Kalbfus. Formerly head of the Naval War College at Newport, he has been a member of the Navy's General Board since 1942. She holds down a full-time job at the D. C. Juvenile Court. . . He's entitled to wear enough decorations to sink a ship but chooses only the prettiest ribbons in the lot; declares they're "a great handicap, because I have to watch my behavior so." . . She's a trained psychiatric social worker with a vast background of experience.

At a recent late-afternoon party, she spotted Adm. Arthur Davis. "I wish I had a bottle of champagne," she said. "I raised Arthur Davis from a midshipman, and I'd like to christen him. Shall it be stern or bow?" Davis declined to make a choice so the matter is still unsettled, and he is still un-christened. . . There's a Kalbfus Road in Newport. In recognition of the Kalbfuses' popularity a street changed its name the week they came to Washington. . . Mrs. Kalbfus has an unusual first name, Syria. "It's after my aunt who happened to be named for the country in which she was born," said the admiral's witty wife. "I've always been glad she didn't first see the light of day in Oshkosh." . . . Admiral Kalbfus, by the way, is of Alsatian origin, even though members of his family have been in this country for many generations. His name means, literally, "calf's foot."

ODDMENTS OF INTEREST: All three children of Vice President and Mrs. Wallace—Henry, Robert and Jean—have middle names beginning with "B." It's the same name, Browne. Their mother is the former Ilo Browne. . . . Dapper, gray-haired Representative John Martin Costello, one of the handsomest men in Congress, hails from Hollywood, looks like a movie star. . . . July 1 will find Justice and Mrs. Thurman Arnold on their way to their Wyoming ranch, where they'll spend the summer. Their elder son, Lieut. Thurman Arnold, is on duty in England; the other, Pfc. George Arnold, has recently been ordered to duty on the West Coast. . . . Two Washington g. g.'s (glamour girls), Elysabeth Barbour and Clare Boothe Luce, were classmates at St. Mary's Episcopal School, Garden City, Long Island. "She was the school beauty," said Clare. "I was the fattest girl in our class. I weighed 160 pounds." You'd never believe that—looking at the streamlined Clare today.

DOUBLE TROUBLE: Two Ann Mitchells turned out at a wedding the other day . . . and one has been denying she was the bride ever since . . . Ann Mitchell, the newly-wed, walked down that popular aisle with John MacKenzie, jr., at Christ Church Saturday . . . Among those present was her friend, Ann Mitchell, down from Greenwich, Conn., especially to attend the ceremony . . . The two Anns are close friends and have double-dated several times, but the minute the engagement of one was made known, the other received a flock of telegrams, telephone calls and letters, wanting details. "No, I'm not engaged," said the Connecticut Ann, time and time again. And now, it's "No, I'm not the married Ann." She's the attractive daughter of Mrs. J. T. H. Mitchell; divides her time between Greenwich and New York, with occasional trips to Washington where she has a host of friends. The former Ann Mitchell, equally popular, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney A. Mitchell of Long Island and Washington.

Many Parties Are Arranged For Michelses

"Don't say goodby. I'll be back very soon."

That is what Christina Michels, daughter of the retiring Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Michels, is telling her many friends here this week. With her parents, Christina will be leaving for Chile June 22, forsaking the Capital that has been their home for many years.

But yesterday, surrounded by packing cases and traveling bags, Senorita Michels and her mother were making plans for their remaining 10 days here. And they were assuring all who called that they would be back for a visit as soon as possible.

To Attend Luncheon

One of the largest parties on their schedule will be the luncheon Friday at the Brazilian Embassy, when the Ambassador and Mme. Martins will entertain. Today the Michels will be honor guests at a luncheon given by the Minister Counselor and Senora de Brull at the Cuban Embassy.

Other affairs Friday will include a cocktail party given by the Guatemalan Ambassador and Senora de Recinos and at 8 o'clock the Chinese Ambassador and Mme. Wei will be dinner hosts in honor of the departing Ambassador, his wife and daughter.

Fill a Need With a Heart Is Mrs. Wainger's Way

By Genevieve Reynolds

'Twas a cold and rainy night. Eager servicemen on weekend liberty bounced into a downtown hotel seeking rooms. A polite but firm no from the room clerk sent them lagging dejectedly. Seems as if the whole town was booked solidly.

A woman nearby observed their dilemma. Her dark brown eyes snapped—but only for a second. Then she walked up, introduced herself and declared, "Boys, I'll find you some place to stay." She wheedles the room clerk into yielding two or three rooms. Quick telephone calls to other hotels and friends take care of six more. The remaining five she invites to her own home—rent free.

This woman, Mrs. Anna Wainger, stands each Friday and Saturday night at the Ambassador Hotel to see that servicemen obtain lodging. Just how she gets the boys located is her own secret but her resourcefulness is amazing. When she sees a hungry-looking lad, she hauls him off to her husband's nearby drug store. Hard luck stories from the servicemen—a lost wallet—find her gladly proffering a gift or loan. Occasionally, she get's taken for a ride. "But that doesn't discourage me", she explains. "Where one serviceman pulls a phony trick, there are hundreds of deserving ones."

Claims Four Sons in Service

"I don't deserve one bit of credit," she insists. "I don't do anything a mother wouldn't do for a son. I just hope someone will de the same for my boy."

Russian-born, Mrs. Wainger claims four sons in the service. Actually there are three nephews and one son, but they all were brought up together and she makes no distinction among them. Proudly she will tell you that they all volunteered. Truth is, this kindly, energetic woman's family has jumped from 4 sons to more than 100 . . . all war adoptions. Not only does she send cookies, cigarettes, etc., to these adopted sons overseas, but a mere mention of a girl friend finds a pair of hose, lipstick, powder and other cosmetics included in the next box.

"I always write the boys, 'Sonny, give the lipstick to your girl,'" explains Mrs. Wainger, who speaks with an accent. "Maybe you can make more time."

It's the personal touch that this black-haired, vivacious woman thinks the boys like most. Not only does she keep her eye peeled for chances to help the enlisted man but a homesick servicewoman gets equal attention.

Refuses Blood Transfusion

Since the food bar opened at the Stage Door Canteen she has been a faithful worker. Until overwork sent her to bed, she put in three nights a week at the canteen, worked for Bundles for America, and the war loan drives.

In desperate need of a blood transfusion, Mrs. Wainger refused it. "Save the blood plasma for the soldiers," she demanded. "One soldier's life is worth more than mine."

Intense about doing all possible for the soldiers, she gets furious when people don't invest all they could in war bonds. One day a wealthy man boasted that he had just purchased a $50 war bond and a $25,000 diamond for his wife. Mrs. Wainger gave him a terrific verbal lashing.

"I don't permit myself to spend one penny beyond necessities except for war bonds," she commented. "Nor does any member of my family buy a new suit or dress. Also I've emptied my closets for Bundles for America."

If you aren't doing your bit for the war don't make the mistake of telling this generous, patriotic woman. You'll get a piece of her alert mind.

Modest about time and money donations to servicemen, Mrs. Wainger gives full credit to her husband, who aids and abets her in all endeavors.

Advice for the Too Thin Girl

Walk Into a Good Figure

By Ida Jean Kain

If you too-thin girls simply can't eat breakfast, and you have to force down every single bite you eat, skip it. Take a walk. Of course, walking won't put weight on you, but it will give you an appetite, and out of this morning walk you can get the kind of figure you have always longed to have.

Get up 30 minutes earlier. You are not going to like this and you are apt to rationalize, that sleep and rest are most important so why get up early. Or, you may decide that if you have to go to all that bother to gain weight, you'd rather stay thin. Oh, no! Besides, you are going to like it.

The first few mornings you'll have to prod yourself into getting out, but after that it will be fun Begin leisurely, with about 15 minutes. But don't saunter. Walk along fairly brisky, swing your arms, and go about three-quarters of a mile altogether. At the end of the first week, increase to one mile. By the third week, you can be stepping off two miles and enjoying a good breakfast.

Get Umph in Your Posture

Walk "tall" but keep your shoulders down and relaxed. Walk with your head up and this automatically lifts your chest and encourages you to pull up with the lower abdominal muscles. This will make a surprising improvement in your figure in a short time. Instead of looking droopy through the chest, you'll have some umph in your posture. Your waistline will be slim and supple, hips smooth, and tummy flat.

Another excellent time to walk is before going to bed at night. If you have trouble falling to sleep, make it a leisurely walk. Start out about an hour and a half after dinner and try to stay out for an hour—30 minutes at the least.

More tips for the too-thin girl are contained in the "Weight Gaining Material." Send large stamped envelope for it to Ida Jean Kain, care of The Washington Post.

For Radiance Let Your Skin Breathe

By Martha Ellyn

Skins must breathe. And the woman who wants to have—and keep—a radiant skin, must give its tiny cells a chance to do so. Some women are blessed with a peaches and cream complexion. The average one, however, has to give care to her skin or her birthdays will be showing.

Martha Ellyn

Skin respiration tends to slow down with age—the younger the skin the livelier its respiration. The most logical procedure is to counteract the depressants of lively skin respiration. Beautiful skin begins with skin health.

I learned, quite by accident, about a new cosmetic product that takes into consideration the skin's respiration. While waiting in a crowded store at the cosmetic section to buy a birthday gift, I stood by a woman who, although her hair was gray and her figure stout, had an exquisite skin—smooth, clear, firm and fine.

"I'm certainly happy to find you here," said the woman to the special representative of a cosmetic firm. My skin has benefited from your creams. I want a jar of the lotion and the cream."

This spontaneous testimonial arrested my attention. I became so interested in the function of the cream and lotion and their scientific birth, that I sought further information about them.

BIRTHDAYS WILL SHOW UP in your skin if it does not breathe freely. A new cosmetic, the outgrowth of scientific research, encourages the activity and vitality of skin cells and so makes it more radiant

The explanation concerning the merits of the cream and lotion is physiology. When biodynes were discovered in a scientific research laboratory, they were found to be cellular substances which stimulate and control the well being of the millions of cells that make up the human body. Biodyne R, which has been incorporated into the compounding of these cosmetics, has the power to stimulate the respiration of the skin's tiny cells and increase their vitalizing oxygen intake. In addition to fine emollient oils, the products contain 2000 units of biodynes per ounce.

The night cream is used after cleansing the skin in the usual manner. In the morning the lotion is applied either as a powder base or skin lotion. Both are in atractive ceramic containers, which may be used in many ways after they are empty. The choice of colors is blue, rose or cream.

The same company that makes the byodyne cream and lotion has also compounded a healing ointment that may be used effectively on minor burns, cuts and abrasions. According to scientists, as respiration increases, healing increases. So this byodyne ointment is fine for wound healing and tissue repair.

Yanks Capture Georgians in German Army

With U. S. Forces in France, June 10 (Delayed) (INS).—A curious group of prisoners taken by the Americans today looked most unlike "Aryans" and turned out to be Orientals, conscripted Russian Georgians, so naive that one of them flung up his hands in fright when a cameraman pointed a lens at him. He thought it was a gun.

An American stretcher-bearer asked one, "What are you fighting for?"

"For money, the same as you," the guy answered. The American spat out of the corner of his mouth and said, "Nuts."

Republicans Count Another Congressman

Decatur, Ill., June 13 (AP)—With no contest in sight, the Republicans figure on picking up an additional seat in the National House of Representatives today in a special congressional election in the 19th Illinois district.

The only name appearing on the ballot is that of the Republican nominee, Rolla C. McMillen, a Decatur attorney. No Democrat sought the nomination.

The election will fill the vacancy caused by the death of William H. Wheat, Rantoul Republican.

Joins Fairchild Staff

Alfred de los Rios, founder of the Inter-American Escadrille and longtime exponent of the unification of the Americas through common interest in civilian flying, has joined the staff of the Fairchild Engine & Airplane Corp., according to J. Carlton Ward, jr., president.

Mr. de los Rios will be active in the foreign sales activities of the corporation as assistant to A. R. Stocker, director of foreign relations, and will make his headquarters in Washington.

League Sets Bond Quota

Members of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League expect to oversubscribe their current 10-million-dollar quota in the Fifth War Loan drive, as they have done in previous campaigns.

The executive council, meeting yesterday in the New Ebbitt Hotel, heard President Clarence E. Kefauver urge member associations to subscribe not only for their own portfolios but also to take an active role in selling bonds to individuals. To further this aim, Mr. Kefauver asked the associations to advertise the securities vigorously and to assist Wilfred H. Blanz, chairman of the individual solicitation committee, in reaching all possible prospects.
